The Greencastle Banner.

Putnamville.

Rev. Woods is holding quarterly meeting at Mt. Olive church.

A great deal of stone is being shipped over the L. N. A. & C. road now, from here and quarries in the southern part of the State.

Bill Shoptaugh was here Sunday, visiting his many friends.

Dave McClure has sold his farm here and will move to Roachdale next fall, where he has purchased some land.

To-day (Thursday) is the third anniversary of our "great" fire, which destroyed the business portion of our town. The burnt district is nearly all rebuilt.

The remains of Capt. Thornton Farrow and three children of his, were removed from the family burying ground on the old homestead east of town, to the cemetery here Friday. Capt. Farrow was the husband of Mrs. Susan Farrow, of Greencastle.

A little child of Mrs. Fannie Easter died Friday evening. The funeral was preached by Rev. Woods. The remains were buried Saturday evening at the cemetery west of town.

With the return of Geo. Raper, from Indianapolis as operator on the W. U. and A. & P. lines, we have communication now from every point making our town more lively in consequence. Nothing like enterprise.

George W. Perry is suffering from carbuncles again.

Jno. Hendrix is night-sawyer at Bayne's saw mill, at Greencastle. Frank Kaiser is also working for a lumber firm in Coatesville. Both are good sawyers.

Mrs. William Kelley, who was sent to the Insane Asylum, at Indianapolis about two months ago, is reported no better but still there are hopes for her recovery.

Floyd Township.

The farmers are marketing their old wheat. It is thought that the outcome in the growing crop will tend to decrease prices.

Corn is generally coming up well.

Zack Beeves has purchased the farm owned by Samuel Elchison. He gets possession next October.

D. T. Summers is negotiating for the purchase of a business establishment in Brazil.

Mellville Sutherland is plastering his house. He will soon be a bona fide resident of Floyd.

Service at Zion last Sabbath conducted by the Rev. Mayhall. In the afternoon a Sabbath School was organized. Quite a number were present. The following is a list of the officers elected: Superintendent, Rev. Mayhall; assistant superintendent, Mr. Cartwright; secretary, Miss Sophia Hackett; treasurer, Miss Lou Case; chorister, Prof. Rice, of Groveland.

The teachers of the several classes: W. Mason, Rev. Mayhall, C. M. Pickett, Mrs. Daniels and Miss Welch. The school will meet at Zion on the first and third Sundays, and at Groveland on the second and fourth.

Mr. Alley has obtained the school at Clear Creek for the ensuing winter. Is the petition method the proper one?

The Hendricks county boys have been making onslaught upon our Walnut fisheries. They come by the wagon loads.

Marion Township.

W. F. Cline and Miss Lydia Harland, of Coatsville, were married since our last.

Mrs. Mary Oliver, who was reported in the earlier part of the spring, as being sick is slowly improving.

Mrs. Lucy Hunter effected a compromise with the lightning rod swindlers by paying them $150.

Thomas Campbell has opened a new furniture store at Coatsville.

There was also a new dry goods store opened there last Saturday.

The Sunday school was reorganized at Bethel last Sunday at 3 o'clock.

The wheat crop will be better than was thought for at first, although not more than two-thirds of a crop is expected in this neighborhood. There will be no blackberries or peaches in this part of the county, the briars and trees having been killed by the cold winter. A good crop of all other kinds of fruit is expected, especially apples and cherries.

Jefferson and Mill Creek.

The parties who started for Colorado are Dr. Fisher, M. M. Hurst, Web Macy, Dave Cohn, all of Belle Union. Fisher stopped off at Fort Scott, Kansas; is well pleased, says the crops are much farther advanced than here. Hurst and Macy went to Colorado, and Cohn to California.

Belle Union has a new dry goods store.

John Cohn takes the place of Dave Cohn in the store of Cohn & Son.

Liberty Scott is the village blacksmith at Belle Union; he takes the Macy stand.

On the fifth Sunday of this month, the funeral of Mrs. Pickens, the lady who died on the road from the Republic Grand Rapid last fall, at Greencastle, will be preached at New Providence at ten and a half o'clock, a. m. Doc. Dunivan went to Danville Ill., prospecting last week and returned Saturday. He talks of moving there and going into business.

George Dorsett died on May 16, with consumption, aged twenty.

Cloverdale.

Elder Martz, of Indianapolis, will preach at the Christian church Saturday night and Sunday.

Miss Mollie Allen has returned home from Terre Haute where she has been attending the Normal school.

Mrs. Jno. Reed of Greencastle is visiting here.

Claud Macy had his finger cut off last week playing with T. C. Utterback's ice-cream freezer.

Mrs. A. J. Rockwell is quite well again.

Everything looks prosperous at Cloverdale.

Bainbridge.

Mr. Lee, of Owensville, Ky., is here visiting relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Mead went to Indianapolis Monday.

Dr. A. C. Fry and wife and Miss Josie Hamilton, of Greencastle, spent last Sunday with friends and relatives here.

A large number of our citizens have been attending court this week as witnesses in the suit of Buiss vs. Carver.

D. C. Bridges is selling out at auction. It is rumored that Mr. Allen, of Crawfordsville, will occupy the room vacated by Mr. Bridges. There is certainly a good opening for some live man in the dry goods business here.

A party consisting of a number of the families along the gravel road west of town indulged in a picnic and fishing excursion last Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Ward came down from Indianapolis and spent a few days last week with their many friends here.

Mrs. Ella Finley, of Missouri, is here visiting her old home.

Captain Wilkinson still continues to improve his premises. He has been repairing and repainting until his home presents a decidedly neat appearance.

R. L. Smith, of Bellmore, was in town Monday. Mr. Smith is one of the live Republicans of Parke county.

The wheat looks well and promises a good crop.

Manhattan.

James Sublett split his foot open with a corn drill a few days ago and it has been bleeding more or less ever since. Yesterday Drs. Purcell and Zane cut his foot open in two or three places and tied up the arteries, a very difficult operation.

Mrs. John Best is quite sick.

Dr. Etter, of New Ross, visited home last week.

Corn planting will be finished up this week—some complain of bad seed corn. Railroad surveyors here this week.

Belle Union.

The prospect for a wheat crop is good. Dr. McClure is sick. Mrs. Chenoweth is much improved.

M. Cohn, of Cloverdale, spent Sunday here with his son John.

D. W. Macy and M. M. Hurst returned from Colorado last night. Macy thinks Kansas the better place for farming.

Miss Edna Dorsett is teaching our summer school.

New Maysville.

Miss Nannie Stewart, of North Salem, is the guest of her sister-in-law, Mrs. W. H. Stewart.

Sunday school was organized at the Baptist church last Sunday; Dr. Swindall, superintendent. We now have three good Sunday schools.

M. V. Hardesty was at Indianapolis last week representing the I. O. O. F. lodge of this place.

Mrs. Boner is convalescing.

Barnard.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely under the superintendency of Valentine Ballenger.

Drs. Rogers and Heady were in attendance at the State medical society last week.

Calvin Barnard is getting over his fall. He is able to ride out again.

Dr. Heady has moved back into his house.

Maple Grove.

John Abrams and wife, formerly of this place, but now of Greencastle, will remove to Centralia, Ills.

Wheat looks well.

Robert Scoobe has the finest field of wheat in the neighborhood.

Several of our citizens attended the gravel road meeting Saturday.

Raccoon.

A. Olliver shipped a car-load of wheat 20th inst. and P. Ashley shipped two car-loads of hogs on the 23d inst.

Eighteen men employed by Hirt of Greencastle, are felling timber in the forests. $4,500 was paid for 450 trees.

Cincinnati Gazette.

The difference between Republican statesmanship and Democratic Demagogism in public finance is illustrated by the conversion of the remaining 5's and 6's into 3's per cents. The Democratic Congress worked at a bill for refunding these bonds, which they wanted to carry out by a forced loan from the national banks. The agitation and menace disturbed the money market until a panic was made and the rate of interest rose to the rate of 14 per cent. a day. The President vetoed their bill. Then Secretary Windom, without any forced loan, any double interest, any disturbance of the money market, converted these bonds by simply offering the holders the option of payment or 3 per cent. interest, to continue during the government's pleasure.

Rockport Journal.

Mr. Lyman Naugle, late editor of the Greencastle Republican, has discontinued his paper and accepted a position as local editor on the BANNER. This little thing of bucking against an established paper is not profitable, and Mr. Naugle soon found it out.

A monument to the memory of President Lincoln's father will be dedicated at Mattoon, Ills., on Decoration Day. The monument is being erected at the expense of Secretary of War Lincoln.

The new dog law recently passed by the legislature went into effect May 1st. It requires the same amount of tax as heretofore, and, moreover, every dog must wear a collar with a tag attached showing that the tax has been paid. This tag must be renewed annually. It is the duty of the constabulary to kill all dogs not wearing the collar and tag attachment, a constable receiving fifty cents for each canine exterminated. Any failure on the part of constables to comply with the requirements of this law renders them liable to a fine. —Attica Leader.

Judge A. B. Carleton, of Terre Haute

has just fallen heir to $50,000 by the death of a rich bachelor relative in Kentucky.

The old reliable Bates House at Indianapolis has recently been refitted, repaired and refurnished in an elegant style. It also has a new landlord, Mr. W. B. Sherman, whose name is sufficient to establish a good reputation for the house. Those who have not stopped at the house for some time would hardly know the place. The office and corridors are now on the first floor, and the dining room, which is very beautifully finished, is on the second floor. It is a splendid place to stop.

A fair proposition—Magnetic Cordial is sold on trial, and if no benefit is derived from its use the money will be refunded. So everything is gained and nothing lost by its use. Try a bottle and be convinced of its power for good. For particulars see advertisement in another column. —tf

The Best offer yet—A new style No. 8, Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine for sale very low for cash. It is unsurpassed by any machine in the market; has all the attachments, and has never been used. If you want a bargain call at BANNER office, or at residence of the editor. —tf

There are numerous pale-faced people in Greencastle, leading miserable lives because of general debility, who could be made happy, and to enjoy life, if they would use Magnetic Cordial. Warranted to give relief or money refunded. It is adapted to the most delicate constitution. —20-3w.

Wanted—Wagon Spoke Timber.

We want 600,000 White Oak Spokes, cut 28 inches long, 14 inches thick cut heart edge and 3 inches wide. Must be good tough timber, straight, free from knots or wormholes, the sap to be taken off. 400,000 Shell Bark and Black Hickory Spokes, cut 28 inches long, 14 inches thick on heart edge and 2 1/2 inches wide. Must be good, tough, sound timber, free from knots or wormholes or black places (the bark, not sap, taken off) for which we will pay the highest market price, to be delivered at our factory in Greencastle. Farmers and lumbermen, look into this; you will find there is money in it. —1-11.

BROCKWAY & ROCKAFELLOW.

Log Hauler Wanted

For steady work. A dwelling house stable and log wagon can be furnished if desired. Enquire at this office. 12-11.

DR. BROWNFIELD'S chill and fever breakers is sure cure for chills and fever. No humbug. For sale by P. Hubbard, near third ward engine house. 46-11

A REIGN OF TERROR.

The Alarming Increase of Heart Disease and the Symptoms Which Precede It.

Leading to Scientific Investigation and Attempt to Check its Increase.

The Wonderful Properties of "Sedative-India", and how to Properly Use It.

Facts of Importance for All Regarding a New Discovery.

The mortality statistics of this country shows that a great proportion of deaths arise from Heart Disease. But aside from the fatality which attends it and inconvenience and suffering which the first stages bring make it necessary to take prompt measures for relief. Undoubtedly the greatest remedy of modern times for curing diseases of the Heart is "Sedative-India," which is accomplishing such wonderful results and attracting so much attention. Another in San Joaquin county, near Oakdale, burned over the county five miles square, principally wheat fields. Four houses were destroyed. The fire started from a lighted cigar thrown from a railroad car.

SENATOR SAUNDERS has offered a resolution in the Senate calling for an inquiry by the Committee on Judiciary touching the relations of the Central Pacific Railroad to the leased lines and corporations in which its stockholders are interested. The object desired is the protection of United States interests.

THE brewers who were in convention in Chicago, Ill., last week, agreed to assist a Kansas brewer to the extent of $75,000, in testing in the courts the validity of the Prohibitory law of the State. The object is to carry the case to the United States Supreme Court on the question of the right of a State to destroy the business interests of a citizen without compensation.

AT the convention of the Episcopal Diocese of South Carolina at Charleston, last week, the presiding Bishop devoted much of his annual address to a denunciation of "the code of honor." Within the past few years, he said, no less than five or six communicants of the church in that State had engaged in duels, either as principals or seconds; and he strongly urged that such persons be rigidly excluded from the sacramental table.

A WASHINGTON special says: Saturday the National bank circulation touched high-water mark. Over $302,000,000 in circulation is credited to the banks by the Comptroller of Currency. At no time in their history have the national banks had in circulation so many notes. The reason given, of course, is that in the present prosperous condition of business more money is wanted than at any time since the war. Some sections (parts of New England, for instance) have fewer notes than are needed, but it is expected that national bank circulation, which is steadily increasing every day, will increase for some time to come. It may reach $375,000,000.

A CASE in political history closely resembling the Conkling-Robertson case, has been dug up from its grave in the past. In 1845 James K. Polk appointed Jonathan I. Coddington Collector of the Port of New York. The appointment was hostile to Silas Wright, who was the leading Democrat of the Empire State, and had resigned a seat in the United States Senate to run for Governor in order to save the State for Polk. Wright antagonized the appointment, but it was confirmed nevertheless. But the feud grew into larger and larger proportions and became an irreconcilable quarrel. In consequence of it the Whigs won their Presidential triumph in 1848.

THE STATE.

Gold is said to have been found in Scott county, near the Jefferson county line.

THE Hessian fly is said to be devastating the growing wheat in the southern portion of the State.

THE City Council of Lafayette is moving towards the establishment of market houses in that city.

A snake, said to be nineteen feet long, was seen on the farm of Hon. J. W. Sanberry near Anderson.

Thomas Miles, an Oakdale black smith, while intoxicated was run over by the cars and fatally injured near North Vernon.

South Bend will, perhaps, be lighted with the Langley electric light—the invention of Prof. Langley, of Michigan University.

It has been discovered that the fly has attacked the wheat in Knox county, and farmers offer their entire crop for the cost of seed.

Thomas Hastie, who killed James Bernet at Markland, Jefferson county, several months ago, has been acquitted on the ground of self defence.

Elder Miller, of the colored Baptist church at Jeffersonville, on Sunday, immersed, among others, Anna Mills, a negro who he said was over one hundred years old.

Mrs. Eleanor Spence, of Marion, aged seventy-nine years, was adjudged insane by Judge Slack, of the circuit court. She is an old resident, and is estimated to be worth $100,000.

HUGHES and Ward, the Hoosier temperance team, have just closed a series of meetings at Tecumseh, Mich., at which about two thousand persons signed the pledge.

Julius Coleman, a member and dealer in the insurance conspiracy gang at Evansville obtained bond in the sum of $3,000, and has been taken, of his own volition, to the insane asylum of St. Vincent, in St. Louis.

Frank McDonald and Naomi Moore, the former fifteen and latter fourteen years of age were married at Shelbyville nearly two years ago. The children have got tired of matrimony and "won't play" any longer. Frank has gone to Kansas.

The Howards are now employing 500 men in their shipyards in Jeffersonville. They will launch three boats next week, and then they will put up the frame-work of two immense steamers for the anchor line of St. Louis.

The missing Richmond councilman, Walter Richey, has unexpectedly returned. It was learned some time ago that he was in Denver. His wife, in spite of all efforts of other friends to dissuade her, went to Denver to see him and induced him to come back with her.

Thursday morning at Hartford City, while attempting to eject a family named Snider, Sheriff Taxson and deputy Gettys were both scalded by Mrs. Snider with boiling lye. Gettys is seriously injured, his nose, one eye, side of his neck and face being badly scalded.

The annual reunion of the State fireman's associations of northern Indiana was held at Goshen recently, nearly all the towns being represented by companies. There were 600 firemen in line. Three bands made the music.

Dr. M. C. McDowell, a member of the legislature, from Allen county, charged by Miss Amanda Rockhill with assault and battery with intent to murder, waived examination, and gave bonds in $1,500 to appear at the criminal court and await the action of the grand jury.

Oliver Truax who acted as marshal and street commissioner of the village of Hope, Bartholomew county has been indicted by the grand jury for embezzling about $200 of the funds of the town, and having failed to secure bail, was committed to jail.

THE people of Crawfordsville and Montgomery county are moving in the matter of making suitable provision for the care of destitute children, under the act of the Legislature which authorizes County Boards to expend not to exceed $5,000 for buildings for that purpose, and to make provision for the support of such children at a cost not to exceed 30 per day for each child placed in such homes.

A singular story comes from Jackson township, Decatur county, of a beeholder who bought a neighbor's box of bees for $100, with the understanding that the latter was to retain charge of the two children. He then sold his farm and "went west," and it is reported that the woman, in the same case disappeared.

Pete McCrea, a deaf and dumb man, while drunk went to the Ray House, Shelbyville, at 11 o'clock Thursday night and attempted to clean them out, and was only kept from doing so by the combined forces of four or five men. J. H. Blankney, of Columbus, struck him several severe blows over the head. It took three men to take him to jail. During all the time his screams were terrible to hear.

Samuel Cunningham, an old and well-known citizen of Crawford county, and a popular river pilot, was sent to the Asylum for the Insane at Indianapolis, ten or twelve days ago, from his home at Leavenworth, under the supposition of insanity. Twenty years ago he was bitten by a rabid dog. The wound healed, but the virus remained in his system. He died at the asylum, Monday evening, his symptoms being precisely those of hydrophobia.

Great preparations are making in Lafayette for the grand prize drill and tournament of division U. R. No. 1, Knights of Pythias, June 22d and 23d. The invitation card and programmes are out, gorgeous in style and execution. The drill prizes are 1st, $300; 2d, $200; 3d, $150; 4th, $100. Band prizes: 1st, $100; 2d, $50. All these contests are to be at the fair grounds on Thursday, June 24. Receptions, parades, etc., the day before. The affair is to be one of the greatest entertainments of the season. Lafayette will spread herself.

A fearful domestic tragedy occurred in Hovey Creek Township Vigo County, Thursday morning. Alexander McPheters killed his wife and sister-in-law, Ella Bloxm, shot at his mother-in-law and then killed himself. Domestic troubles and dissipation was the cause. McPheters had been married to his wife about three years. They had a child two months old and the couple had frequently quarreled. The wife had applied for a divorce. Both families were prominent and highly respectable and the owners of fine farms. The murders and suicide is supposed to have been partially deranged.

Certain citizens of Jefferson county are somewhat excited over the discovery of gold in Scott, the adjoining county. Mr. Isaac Mace, who resides Saluda township, that county, has been for years of the opinion that gold could be found in that section, and has consequently been searching for it. A short time ago his labors were rewarded by finding some of the precious metal. After going through the hands of the assayer it has been decided to be pure, and Mr. Mace has now two nuggets, one valued at $11.60 and the other at $2.80. The gold was found near the Jefferson county line, in Scott county.

Mr. Adam Earl and his son-in-law, Mr. Stuart, of Lafayette, are embarking in the breeding of fine stock on a very broad plan and in some directions quite new to this country. To begin with, they have wintered over 1,200 head of all sorts—a pretty large amount for this state. They have now a short-horn thoroughbred herd of seventy-five head, a herd of fifty imported thoroughbred Herefords, selected personally by them in Europe and Canada, besides some of the finest imported Jerseys. By agents ransacking the state, these gentlemen have selected and purchased over 300 highbred short-horn grade cows, all of deep red color, for breeding to the thoroughbred Herefords. By this cross a fine half-breed Hereford of red color and the distinctive white face will be obtained. The object is to supply Texas and Colorado with bulls to improve the native stock of the western plains. The demand for such animals in the west far exceeds the supply and prices paid are highly remunerative to breeders. The half-bred heifers being crossed with thoroughbreds will produce three-fourths Herefords, and by continuing the system a great herd of nearly pure Herefords will in due course be obtained.

WASHINGTON.

Washington, May 20.

The Senate rejected the nomination of Wm. Chandler as Solicitor General of the Department of Justice. The vote is understood to have been substantially a party division.

The President transmitted to the Senate the report of the Secretary of State upon the case of Michael Boynton, stating the case is not one which would warrant the interference of the United States government, but declaring that, should it be the sense of the Senate, he would counsel the President to appeal to the benevolence of the British government in Boynton's behalf.

The President informed the Senators who called upon him this morning that he would have no further nominations to send to the Senate this session. An effort will be made to adjourn sine die to-day, and it will succeed unless unexpected debate ensues over some of the contested nominations.

The first counterfeit of the silver certificates ever issued was received at the Treasury to-day. It is a counterfeit of the $20 series executed in pen work, but easily detected.

Washington, May 21.

Intimate personal friends of Senator Conkling who claim to know as to his future course, say in the most positive manner that he does not intend to go before the New York Legislature as a candidate for re-election, but that he was sincere in tendering his resignation, and intends to devote himself to law practice for the next few years. It is altogether probable, however, that he will be heard from within the next week in an elaborate speech in which he will give at length his reasons for retiring to private life, and way he cannot support the present Administration.

A private dispatch received from General Grant announces that he will sail from Vera Cruz, Mexico, to-day for New Orleans, from whence he will proceed directly to New York.

The friends of William E. Chandler say that the President will provide him with an office as good as Solicitor General with thirty days, but there is only conjecture as to what the place will be.

Mrs. Garfield's condition remains unchanged. As, however, this is the alternate day upon which her fever is expected to be higher, the attending physicians consider her general improvement as a most hopeful symptom.

The Race for the Vacancies.

New York, May 17.

A special from Albany states that there is talk of Chauncey Depew entering at once into a renewal of the canvass for Senator. Some of Crowley's friends declare their intention to bring him out again, but it is confidentially declared by the stalwarts that Conkling has promised to pull Platt through. Sherman S. Rogers, of Buffalo, is talked of. Trumble, a member of the Assembly, announces that he is authorized to withhold the name of Levi P. Morton from the caucus.

The old differences between the Senate and Assembly caucus committees are likely to arise, and it is among the possibilities that the Senate will decline to go into joint convention and thereby prevent action. There is an abundance of opportunities for novel and startling proceedings, and an evident disposition on both sides to avail themselves of every available warfare.

Senator Robertson expresses confidence in a result favorable to suit his side. He seems in now wise disconcerted by the movement at Washington.

Secretary Elaine's Opinion.

New York, May 17.

A Washington special says: "While Secretary Blaine will say nothing about the resignation of the New York Senators for publication, it is understood his views are as follows: Senators Conkling and Platt have resigned either because, being on the eve of defeat, they desire to retire from public life, or because they desire to secure a re-election from their State Legislature. The Legislature, which recently elected one of them to the Senate, and still more recently warmly indorsed the nomination of Robertson, will hesitate before indorsing their course in the matter of the New York nominations. In any case, they have done a childish thing, from which they will reap no benefit, but their action does not affect the Administration in the slightest. We shall continue in the performance of our duties as though it had not occurred. We are neither surprised nor disturbed, and it will make no difference in the action of the Senate on Robertson's nomination. It will be confirmed."

Terrible Conflagration.

Memphis, Tenn., May 17.

First Dispatch—A fire at Nashville, Tenn., this morning, burned the Noel Building, including the Western Union Telegraph office. Communication with that city is interrupted.

Second Dispatch—The fire is reported to be beyond the control of the fire department, and now includes four squares, with the Noel block as its center.

Cincinnati, May 17.—Private advices from Nashville concerning the fire are meager, but of the most sensational character. They are, in effect, that the fire has been raging since 2 o'clock this morning; that the Western Union Telegraph office, Maxwell House and American newspaper office are burned.

The Mayor of Nashville telegraphed most alarming news to Louisville, expressing fears that the whole city will be destroyed. Louisville has sent engines. Chief Bunker, of this city, has received no call, but is in readiness for one.

WABASH COUNTY BATTLE.

The Fight Between the Indians and the U. S. Troops near Lafontaine, Wabash Co.—Only Second in Importance to Tippecanoe.

Wabash Plaindealer.

In a few months the last remnant of the Indian tribes, that once owned this magnificent Wabash valley and adjacent country, will commence to disintegrate and crumble away. They will then have received their last payment from the government, their reservation will be thrown open to general settlement and they will drift here and there and finally disappear. It seems like a dream, and one can scarcely realize it that the handful of red men, now within the borders of this county, were almost within the memory of our oldest citizens, and only sixty-eight years ago, a powerful and warlike tribe giving battle to the regular troops of the United States, at their village in Liberty township. Yet it is true. The old battle grounds, Mr. Charles Sailors, who resides near it, tells us when he came there, some thirty years ago, could be plainly distinguished by the bullet marks in the trees. Only a few years ago Hon. Elijah Hackleman, the late A. P. Perry, Will Morse and others visited the battle field just below Lafontaine, on the borders of Grant county, and among other relics brought back at least a half bushel of horse shoes from the field, all that was left of the large number of the dragoon's horses that were slain. Old Meshingomasia, the chief, was then alive and pointed out all the places of interest. In Dillon's history of Indiana, a brief account of this battle at Lafontaine is given, which as regards its effect in breaking the power and spirit of the Miami and Indiana savages, was second only in importance to the great battle of Tippecanoe. During 1812 the Miamis had been growing hostile. They had refused to attend the council at Piqua, O., and announced that they had "taken up the tomahawk," so that nothing was left but to conquer and crush them. The duty of attacking and destroying their villages on the Mississinewa was assigned by General Harrison, then in command of the army, to Lieutenant-colonel John B. Campbell, of the 19th regiment, United States army, who, with six hundred Kentucky dragoons, commanded by Col. Simrall, a squadron of mounted volunteers, commanded by Major James V. Ball, a company of infantry, Butler's Pittsburg Blues, Alexander's Pennsylvania riflemen, and a company of scouts marched from Franklinton, Ohio, to subdue the refractory Miamis.

In his letter of instructions to Col. Campbell, General Harrison wished some of the Miamis to be saved from destruction. He said: "There are, however, some of the Miami chiefs who have undeviatingly exerted themselves to keep their warriors quiet, and to preserve their friendly relations with us. This has been the case with Richardville (a half Frenchman, the second chief of the Miamis), Silver Heels, the White Loon, certainly, and perhaps of Pecan, the principal chief of the Miamis, and Charley, the principal of the Eel River tribe. It is not my wish that you should incur any risk in saving those people; but if it can be done without risk it would be extremely gratifying to me and no doubt to the president." * * * An old Canadian, by the name of Godfrey, has lived there several years, and has a squaw for his wife. He is and always has been a friend to the United States. There will be no difficulty in saving him, as his house is apart from the rest."

Colonel Campbell devastated the country all the way along the Mississinewa and towards the last of December arrived before the Indian village, nearly on the site where now stands Lafontaine. At 4 o'clock in the morning Campbell's camp was vigorously attacked, the Indians boldly rushing upon the very lines of tents, which were, however, protected by slight earthworks. At the first fire Captain Pierce was killed, receiving two balls through the body and being tomahawked. The Indians were well armed and poured in a tremendous fire which was warmly returned. The dragoons soon formed behind their horses and from this shelter fought all through the long hours of the gray dawn. In his official report of the fight Colonel Campbell says: "At this time daylight began to dawn. I then ordered Captain Trotter, whose troop had been ordered by Captain Simrall to mount for the purpose, to make a charge. The captain cried out for his men to follow him; they tilted off at full gallop. * * * Major McDowell, with a small party, rushed into the midst of the enemy and exposed himself very much. I can not say too much for this gallant veteran. Captain Markle, with about fifteen of his troops, and Lieutenant Warren, also made a daring charge on the enemy. Captain Markle avenged the death of his relation, Lieutenant Waltz, upon an Indian with his own sword. * * * Fearing that Captain Trotter might be too heavily pressed, I ordered Captain Johnson, the Kentucky light dragoons, to advance with his troops to support him. I found Johnson ready, and Colonel Simrall reports to me that all his other captains viz: Elmore, Young and Smith, were anxious to join the charge, but I called for only one troop. The colonel had the whole in excellent order. Captain Johnson did not join Trotter until the enemy was out of reach. He, however, picked up a straggler or two that Trotter had passed over. The cavalry returned and informed me that the enemy had fled precipitately. I have, on this occasion, to lament the loss of several brave men, and many wounded; among the former are Captain Pierce, of the Ohio volunteers and Lieutenant Waltz, of Markle's troop."

In this engagement the loss to the United States troops was eight killed and forty-two wounded, several of which afterward died of their wounds. The number of horses killed was one hundred and seven, which accounts for the large number of iron shoes found by Mr. Hackleman and his party. Fifteen Indians were found dead on the battle ground and it is probable that an equal number were carried away dead or mortally wounded. The Indian force engaged in the battle was inferior in numbers to that under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Campbell, who says in his official report: "I am persuaded that there could not have been less than three hundred of the enemy."

A nephew of the great Miami chief, Little Turtle, was in the engagement. His name was Little Thunderer, and he distinguished himself by his efforts to inspire the Indians with courage and confidence. From this fight Colonel Campbell, who feared to meet Tecumseh, and urged by the intense coöperation of the weather, returned to the Ohio post, having 303 men frost-bitten on the way.

The importance of this battle and the fact that its very locality, if not marked, will soon pass away, certainly calls for some action on the part of the proper authorities in marking the site by an enduring monument.

The Captain Markle mentioned in the above is the gallant officer after which the town of Markle is named, as Waltz township is named after the gallant Lieutenant Waltz, whose death Markle avenged.

The Eel river chief, Charley, spoken of in General Harrison's letter, had his village just northwest of Wabash, and Charley creek is named after him.

Mr. Elijah Hackleman some years ago took to the pains to make a map of the battle-ground, by the aid of which one can gain a great deal of information regarding the battle.

In consideration of the friendliness of Meshingomasia, Richardville and Godfrey, spoken of in General Harrison's letter, the families of these chiefs were permitted to remain in Indiana when the balance of the tribe was removed west, and their descendants are the Indians now found in this, Grant and Miami counties.

How to Remember.

Mr. George Yule, a native of Scotland, lectured last evening at Clarendon Hall on "The Marvels of Memory." After telling his audience what the various mental philosophers have explained memory to be, he showed what he could do in the memory business. He had a blackboard on the platform, and he invited any person in the audience to go up and write down as many words as he could get on the board, simply requesting that the words should be chiefly the names of objects or persons.

A man who seemed to take an unusual interest in the matter, went up and wrote down twenty-two words, beginning with "park," "avenue," "pond," and finishing off with "butter," "cheese," and "eggs." Each word was numbered. The twenty-two words having been read off, Mr. Yule, with his back to the board, named all the words in their proper order, and then repeated them rapidly backward. He then unrolled a scroll of strong paper that reached nearly the whole length of the hall, on which was written all the sixty-six books of the Old and New Testaments, and the number of chapters to each book. He repeated them all from Genesis to Revelations, and gave the number of chapters to each book without making a mistake. On the scroll was also written the names of all the principal cities of the world and as fast as anybody could call them off he would give the latitude and longitude of the places. This he also did without making any mistake.

By this time his listeners had become thoroughly interested, and several in the audience begged him to explain his method at once. One enthusiastic young man exclaimed: "I think I know how you do it, and I believe I could do the same thing after six weeks' practice." Mr. Yule smiled. Then the lecturer asked persons in the audience to call out any event that was written on the scroll, and without the slightest hesitation he would give the date of the event and the place at which it occurred.

Then Mr. Yule began to explain his method. "Let us begin with the word 'lion,'" he said, and he wrote the word on the blackboard. "Now," said he, "let the next word be 'boy.' Well, it's easy to imagine a lion and a boy espousing each other in a forest. Let the next word be 'tree.' We imagine the boy climbing a tree to get away from the lion. Let the next word be 'song.' We immediately imagine the boy singing a song on account of his good luck at getting beyond the clutches of the lion. Let the next word be 'fall,' then 'hunter,' then 'gun,' and so on. It is very easy to imagine that the boy lost his hold, fell to the ground but was rescued by a hunter with his gun, and so on."

Mr. Yule said that this was an easy lesson for beginners, but that with the practice an anecdote could be constructed on the basis of almost any kind or number of words that could be named in the most haphazard manner. He promised to explain his method more in detail at some future lecture.

The Bible and Bob.

Burlington Hawkeye.

Some one sends us a little tract containing epigrammatic expressions from Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll's latest lecture. "What must we do to be saved." We have read the tract and have read the entire lecture. If this is truly Ingersoll's creed, the Colonel isn't so far out of the way. He is coming around, maybe. He manages to get considerable scripture into his creed, as he sets it forth. There is lots of hope, in fact there is a great deal of certainty for the Colonel. We subjoin a few articles from this man's creed, just to show from what book he got his declaration of faith:

"Honest industry is as good as pious idleness," says the Colonel.

Well that's all right. That's orthodox. The Bible says the same thing, and said it long before the Colonel thought of it—"Faith without works is dead."

"Christ believed the temple of God to be the heart of man,"—Ingersoll.

Yes, that's orthodox, too. We must worship him in spirit." "Know ye not that ye are the temples of the Holy Ghost."

"If I go to heaven I want to take my reason with me,"—Ingersoll.

Of course, and so you will, "for now we see through a glass, darkly, but then face to face; now I know in part, but then I shall know even as I am known,"—[Corinthians, xiii, 12.]

"Fear is a dagger with which hypocrites assassinate the soul,"—Ingersoll.

That is good gospel, and "perfect love casteth out fear."

"If I owe Smith ten dollars, and God forgives me, that doesn't pay Smith,"—Ingersoll.

Correct you are; and the prayer of Christianity is "forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors." Owe no man anything.

"Reason is the light of the soul, and if you haven't the right to follow it what have you a right to follow?"—[Ingersoll.]

"Yet in the church I had rather speak five words with my understanding, than by my voice I might teach others also, than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue. Brethren, be not children in malice be ye children, but in understanding ye be men,"—[I. Corinthians, xvi, 10, 20.]

If you go to hell, it will be for not practising the virtues which the sermon on the mount proclaims,"—[Ingersoll.]

That's all orthodox. "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."

"The men who saw the miracles all died long ago. I wasn't acquainted with any of 'em,"—[Ingersoll.]

me way with th' ement who saw Servetus burned. But the Colonel most firmly believes that Servetus was burned.

"A little miracle now, right here—just a little one—would do more toward the advancement of Christianity than all the preaching of the last thirty years,"—[Ingersoll.]

If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead,"—[Luke, xvi, 31.]

"If there is a God in the universe he will not damn an honest man,"—[Ingersoll.]

"A false balance is an abomination unto the Lord; but just weight is his delight,"—[Proverbs, xi, 1.]

There is only one true worship, and that is the practice of justice,"—[Ingersoll.]

"Render therefore unto Caesar the things which be Caesar's, and unto God the things which be God's,"—[Luke, xx, 25.]

"God will not damn a good citizen, a good father or a good friend,"—[Ingersoll.]

Certainly not; nor any good man.

"A good man showeth favor and leniency; he will guide his affairs with discretion. Surely, he shall not be moved forever; the righteous shall be held in everlasting remembrance,"—[Psalms xxii, 5, 6.]

"Study the religion of the body in preference to the religion of the soul. A healthy body will give a healthy mind, and a healthy mind will destroy superstition,"—[Ingersoll.]

That explains why the Indians have no superstitions.

"People who have the smallest souls make the most fuss about saving them,"—[Ingersoll.]

Of course Colonel; they are the hardest kind to save.

"I never ask God to treat me any farther than I treat my fellow men,"—[Ingersoll.]

Well that is perfectly orthodox. "For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your Heavenly Father will also forgive you but if you forgive men not their trespasses, neither will your father forgive your trespasses." "For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged; and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured out to you." Upon the Shadowy shore of death the sea of trouble casts no wave,"—[Ingersoll.]

The Colonel must have been singing that good old hymn, "When I can read my title clear," in which occur the lines:

"And not a wave of trouble roll Across my peaceful breast."

The Dog.

A JEALOUS HUSBAND.

Badly Deceived by a Letter Found in His Wife's Room.

Celia Logan tells the following amusing story in a Philadelphia paper: "A handsome young actress attached regularly to one of the New York theaters has a husband and a baby, a sickly little thing, and the husband is outrageously jealous, all the more that this season he has done 'job work,' which has kept him 'on the road' pretty constantly. Lately he 'came in,' the 'combination' with which he was connected having 'gone up.' He arrived unexpectedly late one afternoon and found his wife was out. On the table lay a note addressed to her in a masculine hand. It was opened and ran thus:

DEAR FRIEND—I do not think you have any cause to be anxious about the baby. It is only cutting its teeth a little hard—that's all. However, as you desire it, and say it would relieve your mind, I will come tonight about 9 and stay all night with you. Don't speak of the trouble. I shall only be too glad to let you get a little sleep after being up so much with baby. Your true friend, K. S. STANTON, M. D.

The husband was furious at this note, seemingly so harmless. He thrust it into his pocket, and without waiting to see his wife strode from the house. He had now, he thought, what he had long suspected, proof of his wife's infidelity. Why, it was shameful. Dr. Stanton would pass the night, would he, and blame it on the baby, but he would find that there was a husband around ready to deal terrible vengeance upon the betrayer. His feelings were not pleasant ones, as he lay perdue the rest of the day, nursing his wrath, to keep it warm. When the pretty young actress came home she was told that a gentleman had called and gone away in a great hurry, leaving no name. At about 10:30 that evening, while she was at the theater, the door of her bed-room was dragged open furiously, and the enraged husband rushed in. He looked around under the bed and into the closets, but found no man. There were, however, two persons in the room. One an infant slumbering peacefully in the crib, the other lady sitting at a small table on which lay several little bits of white paper into which she was pouring some globules from a tiny bottle. Her eyes were blue, her complexion a pure pink and white, and her hair, curling in loose ringlets over her well-formed head, was just lighted with gray. She up and asked and said: "Don't make such a noise; you'll wake the child. Are you a burglar? What do you want?" The husband paused in his fruitless search, and replied: "I want that man." "What man?" "The man that made an appointment with wife for to-night." "Who is your wife, and what business have you in Miss—'s bed-room?" asked the lady. "Miss—'s wife," "Indeed! Well, you can't make me believe that she ever made any appointment with any man she oughtn't to make." "I can't, can't I? Read that then," he said, throwing the letter on the table, and scattering the medicine. The lady read the letter and began to laugh, which enraged the husband still more. "Where have you hidden this Dr. Stanton? I will blow his brains out," he cried. "No you won't." "You see if I don't." "Well, blow then," replied the lady. "I am Dr. Stanton, the writer of that letter."

A Death-Bed Confession.

Chicago Tribune.

The little town of Crisfield, in the lower part of Maryland, is at present exercised over a singular sensation, which proves only too terribly the old axiom that the innocent are oftentimes made to suffer for the crimes of the guilty. The startling story is the death-bed confession to-day of a dying woman, that she and her son, the latter recently deceased, were the murderers of a well-known merchant near Crisfield about eighteen years ago, for which crime two negroes were convicted and hanged. The woman who is alleged to have made the confession, the authorities for the present keeping the matter quiet, is one Patty A Ward, living a few miles from Crisfield. She is dying with a cancer, and is said to be in great terror of meeting her Maker with so awful a crime upon her soul. It is understood that she has freely confessed the full details of the horrible affair, in which she discloses the fact that she, together with her son, murdered Azariah Dougherty, who was found lying dead in his store in the latter part of the year 1862. When her son died a few months ago, in his last moments he gasped to his friends surrounding his bedside that he wished to reveal something, but a gesture from his mother prevented him. The object of the murder was plunder. At the time the tragedy was committed suspicion rested upon two colored men, who were arrested and suffered the death penalty for the crime, as above stated. It was known that Mr. Dougherty had considerable money, but none of it was found after the murder, either in the house or in the possession of the colored men. A penknife was, however, found in the pocket of one of the men which had belonged to Mr. D., and that was the strongest point of circumstantial evidence. On the scaffold both men protested their innocence to the last, and one of them declared in a speech made from the gallows that the real perpetrators of the crime would be some time discovered. Although the story of the crime and the execution of the two colored men had long been forgotten, it is now revived with great excitement in the country town and in this city, further developments being anxiously awaited.

Artemas Ward's Pranks.

Portland Press.

I once shared his room and bed at a tavern in Oxford County. The house was old and rickety, the window rattled hideously in the casement, the chill November wind came through a couple of broken panes with too much force for comfort, and sleep was nearly impossible. After turning and tossing awhile in a vain endeavor to court forgetfulness, Artemas rose, and lifting the lamp made a most solemn survey of the room in every part. Presently he emerged from a deep closet in the corner with a dilapidated hoop-skirt in his hand, which he gravely hung up before the window. "Now, what are you doing?" was asked of him. Artemas slowly placed the lamp on the floor, turned on me a look of pity, and with an argumentative gesture of his right hand half muttered to himself: "Twil keep out the coarsest of the cold, anyway!"

Artemas was known in the family and among his schoolmates as "Chub," a name given him by his facetious brother Cyrus, as satire on his tall, gaunt make-up.

I do not remember to have ever seen any notice of Artemas's happy use of pantomime in his humorous moods among his associates. There was an unapproachable eloquence sometimes in it. He had a way of making quotation marks in the air with his left and right forefingers, on occasions that was irresistibly funny. Once he was engaged to fill an evening in the lecture course of a popular literary institution of a New-England city. During the lecture an individual who occupied a seat on one of the front benches seemed determined to resist the speaker's efforts to make him laugh. Artemas soon discovered both the listener and his intention and concentrated all his powers on him. For a long time it seemed as if the man had the best of it, but by-and-by one of Browne's queer conceits took effect. The obstinate fellow gave way and laughed and kicked like a delighted schoolboy.

Artemas celebrated his victory by coolly announcing to his audience: "Ladies and gentlemen, this will terminate the first act, and we will drop the curtain for a few moments; while the scenery is being arranged for the next act the lecturer will take occasion to go out to see a man," and with perfect sang froid he left the platform for the ante-room, where he quietly refreshed himself with weak tea and a cracker, and gleefully told the story of his contest.

Half a dozen of his associates were sitting one day in his room at the village hotel where he boarded, when an old woman drove up to the store opposite with a pair of donkeys—a jack and jenny—hitched to a little wagon. Jack was the noisiest brute in the country. He had a voice worse than the handle of the town pump on a frosty morning, and was proud of it. In a minute his tail rose to a horizontal, his nose was thrust forward, his lips parted, and the beast blew his infernal blast. A second and a third time it was repeated. Artemas quietly thought "that thing might be fixed," and disappeared from the room. He went over and appeared to make a careful inspection of the fore wheels of the wagon, the harness and the hitchup; and came back saying that the donkey was all right; the brute must have made a mistake about something. Presently there were indications of a movement on Jack's part; the neck was extended, the lips curled and the tail rose—to the pivotal point and no further. The trumpet didn't sound. Jack thought there was a mistake somewhere—hesitated—reflected—and tried again. The front part, some of it, was all right; but the equilibrium could not be reached. After a time another attempt was made and failed. Jack turned his head around to ascertain the cause of the failure, but couldn't see any. The fifth vain attempt to bray was followed by a spiteful kick at Jenny, but it didn't cure the matter. At last he gave it up and stood at that store door the most neglected looking, discontented donkey in existence. Meantime, Artemas enjoyed the fun and discharged a rattling fusillade of pungent humor that kept the party in a roar and made the whole affair one of the most ludicrous that I ever experienced. Artemas had attached a heavy stone to the donkey's tail, leaving just play enough to the cord to allow the beast to get his tail nearly up to "concert pitch."

Mrs. Garfield on Woman's Work.

Cleveland Leader.

The latest number of the Student, a little paper published by the students of Hiram College, contains an article of more than ordinary interest on the above subject. It quotes an extract from a letter written by Mrs. Garfield to her husband over ten years ago, and intended for no eyes but his. It fell into the hands of President Hinsdale, who made use of it in a lecture to his students and as it showed the qualities of Mrs. Garfield's mind, and her opinions upon woman's work, he gave it to the students. The extract is as follows:

I am glad to tell you that, out of all the toil and disappointments of the summer just ended, I have risen up to a victory; that the silence of thought since you have been away has won for my spirit a triumph. I read something like this the other day: 'There is no healthy thought without labor, and thought makes the laborer happy.' Perhaps this is the way I have been able to climb up higher. It came to me one morning when I was making bread. I said to myself, 'Here I am, compelled by an inevitable necessity to make our bread this summer. Why not consider it so by trying to see what perfect bread I can make? It seems like an inspiration—and the whole of life grew brighter. The very sunshine seemed flowing down through my spirit into the white loaves; and now I believe my table is furnished with better bread than ever before—and this truth, old as creation, seems just now to have become fully mine, that I need not be the shirking slave to toil, but my regal master, making whatever I do yield me its best fruits. You have been the king of your work so long that maybe you will laugh at me for having lived so long without my crown, but I am too glad to have found it at all to be entirely disconcerted even by your merriment.

"Now, I wonder, if right here does not lie the terrible wrong, or at least some of it, of which women suffer greatly complain. The wrongly educated woman thinks her duties a disgrace, and frets under them, or shirks them if she can. She sees man triumphant in pursuing his vocation, and thinks it is the kind of work he does, which makes him grand and regnant; while as it is not the kind of work at all, the way in which, and the spirit with which, he does it."

In the above lines, written in a quiet, unassuming way, there is a great depth of worldly philosophy and sound common sense. A woman who can utter such thoughts and practice them in her daily life is really great and worthy to be the wife of the chief magistrate of this Nation. She will make a model mistress of the White House, and the sunshine which floated down through her spirit "into the white loaves" in her humble home will brighten the presidential mansion so long as it is her home. The strong common sense which characterized her ten year ago, strengthened by time and experience, will preside over the new duties she is called upon to perform in a larger and higher circle of life.

Lincoln and Douglas as Lawyers.

I. N. Arnold.

Lincoln and Douglas were both self educated, and each the builder of his own fortune. Each became very early the recognized leader of the political party to which he belonged.

Douglas was bold, unflinching, impetuous, denunciatory and determined. He possessed, in an eminent degree, the qualities which create personal popularity, and was the idol of his friends.

Both Lincoln and Douglas were strong jury lawyers. Lincoln on the whole, was the stronger jury lawyer we ever had in Illinois. Both were distinguished for their ability in seizing and bringing out, distinctly and clearly, the real points in a case.

Both were very happy in the examination of witnesses; I think Lincoln the stronger of the two in cross-examination. He could compel a witness to tell the truth when he meant to lie. He could make a jury laugh, and, generally, weep at his pleasure. Lincoln on the right side, and especially when injustice or fraud were to be exposed, was the strongest advocate. On the wrong side, or on the defense, where the accused was really guilty, the client with Douglas for his advocate would be more fortunate than with Lincoln.

Lincoln studied his cases thoroughly and exhaustively. Douglas had a wonderful faculty of extracting from his associates, from experts and others, by conversation, all they knew of a subject he was to discuss, and then make it so thoroughly his that all seemed to have originated with himself. He so perfectly assimilated the ideas and knowledge of others that all seemed to be his own, and all that went into his mind came out improved.

One Good Deed.

Bill Poole, of New York, sport and philist, was not a model man. He did not pretend to be, and while so pretending, rob his fellows. He had some genius traits which may be reckoned up hereafter. It is related of him that one Thanksgiving day, just before he was killed, he came to a marketman's stand and putting down $100 said: "Send chickens and turkeys for that amount to the charities."

"You can't have all of this," the dealer replied; we mean to have a hand in." The result was the poultry dealers of the market clubbed together, and the next day all the principal charities of New York received turkeys and chickens without stint. Bill Poole's $100 was only a drop in the bucket, but it was the drop that filled it. Since that time Washington market has contributed tons of poultry and meat to the charities of the city, and has organized a system that adds materially in the efforts of the charitable to make at least one day of the year a pleasant and a happy one to the fortunate.

This shows how one good action often impels many, and it demonstrates too that, among the outcast of the earth there is often a flicker of the divine spark that redeems them from total depravity.

What Avarice Will Do.

Wesley Martindale was recently interred in the Gallipolis, O., cemetery, and it was discovered on Monday that the grave had been tampered with, and investigation disclosed the fact the head had been cut off and carried away.

Martindale left an estate valued at $50,000, all of which he left to his wife. After his death his relatives, two brothers and a sister, brought suit to set aside his marriage contract on the grounds of his incapacity to make a marriage contract, claiming that the cause of his death was a tumor on the brain, which had produced insanity. They made application to have the body exhumed and a post mortem held, but the application was not granted, and now the head has disappeared.

Richmond, Va., is to have a new city hall to cost $500,000.

The Greencastle Banner.

GEO. J. LANGSDALE,
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR

Greencastle, Indiana,
THURSDAY, MAY 26, 1881.

TERMS for the BANNER:

One year.....$1.50
Six months......75
Three months......40
One month......15
Twenty-five cents additional when delivered by carrier.

The BANNER has been waiting patiently for an expression of opinion from the other side regarding our new Republican Judge, S. D. Coffey. At last we have it. A Democratic paper speaks in unmeasured terms of approbation of the Judge and his work, and the other day a well-known Democrat said that if the opportunity occurred his vote would be cast for him. At the same time Republicans are delighted with him. The BANNER congratulates Judge Coffey on this happy state of affairs, and, since we could not have a man from our own county, is glad that the choice fell on one so eminently qualified in every respect for the place.

Wilbur Sheridan, of Greencastle, who was our agent more than three years, now holds a responsible position in a leading business house of that town, and many of our agents now in good situations, began by doing work for the News, and doing it well.—Indianapolis News.

Wilbur ascribes the foundation of his good fortune to the fact that he began work as carrier of the BANNER. He did his work so well that we were able to recommend him for promotion when the opportunity occurred, and he is now going right on in a business career which promises great success. Herein is a secret and a lesson for other boys.

About the only paper the colored exchange fiend had a hankering after has failed to reach this office for several weeks, and Ebony is inconsolable. We fear Brother Langsdale don't appreciate the Gazette, or has he soured on the Danville exoduster who used to hide it under his coat tail each week?—Danville Gazette.

That you may be no longer inconsolable we again place you on our exchange list. Read the BANNER that waves for all, follow its teachings and be happy.

Plainfield is working to secure the location of a college there. John Hanna gave $100 to the project and promises another hundred.

How can men who vote with the Democrats claim to be Republicans? This is a problem which the BANNER can not solve.

Crawfordsville Journal.

Before the duty on quinine was repealed there was a great cry among the free trade papers demanding the repeal of the duty. The effect of the repeal, throwing as it has, the monopoly of the manufacture of the drug into foreign hands, has been to increase the price. These same papers now begin to see that it is not the duty but the "work of the monopolists."

Boothblackening well conducted is anything but an unprofitable business. At least this must be the conclusion of those who know any thing of the earnings of the boys who manage their business well. There is one boy in this city who at one time had laid by about $600. He had worked up a business which brought him an income of from $20 to $25 a week, and bid fair to become an opulent citizen. In an evil hour, however, he got up above his business, so to speak, and gave it up for the purpose of entering upon something more lucrative and high-toned. This was his first step down hill, and now the young man is penniless and worthless. He smokes, and drinks, and gambles, and the probabilities are that he will end his days in wretchedness and want. The lesson to be drawn from this boy's brief history is that no boy, no matter what his vocation, should get above his business. Any kind of legitimate work is honorable, and the boy who sticks to his business and does his work thoroughly and well, saves money, and is addicted to no bad habit, will grow to a man honored and respected, and a blessing to the community in which he lives.

Terre Haute News.

The new car for W. R. McKeen, president of the Vandavia road, will be placed on the road in a couple of weeks. It is said to be a splendid and very complete car in every respect. The old directors' car will be used hereafter only as a pay car.

Two years ago the Rev. Mr. Norris, a Baptist clergyman at Guilford, Maine, had trouble with his congregation because of his greenback views, and the Baptist conference sent him to Burma as a missionary; there lately the natives killed and ate him. Where is the gifted De La Maty? The heathen pine for him.

Terre Haute Express.

Our State has several crumbs of comfort from the governmental table at Washington. Gen. Lew. Wallace is transferred from the governorship of New Mexico to the Turkish mission. Roswell G. Wheeler, of this city, has been appointed agent of the Pima and Maricopa Indians in Arizona. Albert W. Bash (Wa. Bash probably) is announced as the collector of customs for the district of Puget Sound, Washington Territory. John B. Glover is appointed consul to Havre, vice John A. Bridgeland, of Indiana, recalled. It is announced that John W. Foster, minister to Russia, is to be recalled next January, in which case Indiana may possibly get another appointment there. Judge Taylor, of Ft. Wayne, has a place on the Mississippi river commission.

Brazil Enterprise.

Most of the mines have resumed operations on limited time. The trade is not active, and from present indications work will be lax during the summer. No reduction has been asked, and miners are still working at the old rate of $1.00 per ton.

The public installation of officers in the lodge of colored Odd Fellows last Monday night caused a general outpouring of the colored population. Large delegations were here from Terre Haute and Greencastle besides those of this city and vicinity. To their credit it must be said that a more orderly and a more jovial crowd never got together in this city.

Last Saturday night a man was knocked down on the street without any provocation whatever, and another, at a different time and place, but doubtless by the same gang, was stabbed under the same circumstances, and only saved from fatal injury by reason of the knocking a rib. Such outrages are becoming so numerous as to make it dangerous for persons to be on the street after dark.

Rockville Republican.

The citizens of Greencastle are discussing the question of making a donation to the Eel River & Vincennes railroad company with a view to securing the location of the machine shops at that point, and we notice that they wisely refuse to take action in the matter until the company first binds itself to comply with this requirement. That's business.

Owen County People.

The gravel road question, like any other eruptive disease, has had its run, dried up and nobody killed. When the mud gets about two feet deep, next spring it will break out again with all the usual symptoms. It is a peculiar disease.

Danville Democrat.

The Eel River & Vincennes R. R. company ask Greencastle to vote a liberal tax for the construction of the road, in return for which they propose to locate and operate shops at that point. Those who have the matter in charge with a good degree of good sense ask for an agreement that will compel the company to fulfill this agreement. The people of a community can afford to help a railroad to the extent it helps them and no more.

Colonel Thomas A. Scott, ex-president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, died Friday night last.

Fighting Rats.

Clay County Enterprise.

No man could be regarded as a very great man who would spend his life killing rats, especially when it is remembered that his efforts to exterminate this species of vermin would be futile. It would be small business, and his life work would have small effect in the direction of ridding the world of the rodent pest.

For the same reason the person who spends any considerable part of his time and energy in fighting those who are eternally snarling and snapping at him, will find his life consumed in a petty warfare in which even victory would be a burlesque. Many persons seem to have no other object in life than to fight their enemies, and the worst of all is, their suspicious minds raise up imaginary enemies upon whom they fight with all the desperation of a man with the delirium tremens, in his efforts to drive away or subdue the monsters with which his disordered mind surrounded him. It never pays to settle old scores. It will only involve a person in fresh controversies, and result in degrading whoever indulges in it to a level with the basest of men. If you have an enemy who is maliciously bent on injuring you, ignore his existence and act as if you had not yet found out that there is such a person in the world. Then he will get frantic in his efforts to make himself felt. The more you ignore him the madder he will get, until he is consumed in his own wrath. Then you can condescend to smile on him. If he does not die with rage he will then begin to recover from the attack, but he will come out of the campaign exhausted, jaded, beaten and humiliated, and will thereafter be careful upon whom he declares war. Life is too short to admit of much of it being consumed in fighting rats.

Nothing Like It In Putnam.

Rockville Republican.

Contracts for building gravel roads in this county were awarded on Friday last as follows:

Section No. 2—three miles in length—of the Rockville and Marshall road, to Thomas Slatterly, for the sum of $4,500.

The Rockville and Newport—a fraction over four miles in length—to Stringer & Stewart, for the sum of $6,475.

Section No. 1 of the Rockville and Roseville road—five miles in length—to Darroch & Strouse, for $8,945.

Section No. 2 of the same road—reaching from the south terminus of section No. 1, to the town of Roseville, to Stringer & Stewart, for $6,400.

Work will be commenced at an early day on all the above contracts.

Rev. J. W. Greene, of Terre Haute, will deliver the decoration address in Rockville.

Revolutions are in progress in three of the largest churches of Indianapolis, Baptist, Methodist and Presbyterian, and have been attended with marked interest.

The central committee of the anti-prohibition league have issued an address to the people of the State, explanatory of their motives in opposing the proposed prohibition amendment to the constitution. It also includes the plan of work for township and town organizations and an earnest appeal for united effort. The anti-prohibition league is composed mostly of saloon keepers and the manufacturers of liquor. The effect of their organized work against the amendment will be to make the prohibitionists redoubtable their zeal.

Major John B. Glover, of Bedford, who has been appointed consul to Havre, to succeed John A. Bridgeland, was formerly treasurer of state. The office is a very desirable one. Bridgeland got the place through Senator Morton's friendship, and Glover is appointed now through Senator Harrison's influence.

The Common Council of Boston has voted to have $15,000 worth of Fourth of July this year.

The entire revised New Testament was published in Chicago in the Times and Tribune on Sunday morning. It was sent over the wires by the Western Union Telegraph Company, and contained 90,655 words. As no previous notice of this extra work had been given the telegraph company, and as it was in addition to their regular press and ordinary business messages, the feat was unparalleled in the annals of telegraphy. Twenty-one direct circuits with New York were in use, and the time consumed was less than seven hours.

Judge Anthony, of the Chicago Criminal Court, sentenced John Carey, saloon keeper, to pay a fine of $100 and to be imprisoned ten days for selling liquor to an habitual drunkard. It is the first conviction of the kind. The case was fully examined, the drunkard's wife and children, of whom he has twelve, called in to testify, and the circumstances were shown to be peculiarly aggravated, the drunkard becoming imbecile in his appetite for drink as soon as he got started on his periodical spree, and being kept in the defendant's shop until his money was exhausted, and this in spite of the entreaties of wife and children. The example is a wholesome one, and the penalty mild for the case.

Gen. Benet, Chief of Ordnance, recommends the abolition of the bayonet. One million copies of the Revised New Testament have been sold in London.

It is now stated that Gen. Grant failed to obtain the concessions he desired from the Mexican government and that he returns discouraged.

A mass meeting of people in New York agreed to a protest against the hanging of Hessy Helfman in Russia, and sent the Czar a cable dispatch to that effect.

A number of Brooklyn clergymen used the Revised New Testament Sunday. Several Cincinnati clergymen were also prompt in the public use of the New Translation.

At Christ Church, Raleigh, N. C., Sunday, Edwin A. Osborne, a distinguished Confederate officer, was ordained a priest of the Protestant Episcopal Church, Bishop Lyman officiated. There was a great crowd in attendance. Col. Osborne received many severe wounds during the war.

Old John Brown's widow has been presented with $3,000, which sum was contributed by the people of the Pacific coast through the newspapers.

Mrs. Abraham Lincoln is very ill, and daily growing weaker. Her mind is very much impaired, and her condition is such that she does not leave her room. Her son, the Secretary of War, is expected to arrive in Springfield to visit his mother some time this week.

WILSON'S BOSS FLY SCREEN.

For Doors and Windows, is cheaper than the common screen, and is the only screen in the world which allows flies to pass from the apartment side and prevents their return. This principle can be applied to any screen now in use, and easily arranged for door or transom. No measurements are required for windows; every screen fits from 20 to 36 inches in width. Your attention is called to the combinations in the above inventions, the most practical ever introduced to the public. It took four first premiums in 1880. Good, No. 1 men wanted everywhere, to sell territory, by State or county, on large commission. Samples and circulars to agents. Address for particulars, with 3 cent stamp, J. S. WILSON, 64 N. East street, Indianapolis, Patentee and Manufacturer. Certificates testifying to the merit of this screen have been given the inventor by a large number of business men throughout the country.

LOCAL DEPARTMENT.

A good rain is needed badly.
Aaron Hall has moved to Brazil.
Mrs. George W. Black is sick with a fever.
The farmers are about through planting corn.
There are still several cases of measles in the city.
The county clerk issued five marriage licenses yesterday.
Eternal vigilance will be the price of potatoes this year.
D. L. Vandament, of Spencer, was in the city Monday.
Levi Whitted, of Carpentersville, has moved to Greencastle.
Robert Lockridge and wife are visiting relatives in St. Louis.
Mrs. B. F. Hays is making an extended visit to Pana, Ill.
Mrs. Geo. Blake has returned from her visit to Logansport.
Base-burners are no more—unless you sit down on a cook stove.
Painters and paper hangers are getting mighty little rest just now.
Columbus Anderson is building a residence six miles west of town.
Marshall Starr gets a new trial in the case of Bill Hurst against him.
Rev. F. C. Iglehart made a hasty call on his Greencastle friends yesterday.
Will Hawkins is building a residence on the Putnamville road one mile south of Forest Hill.
Dr. A. S. McCandless has removed from New Maysville to Medaryville, Pulaski county.
This month has five Sundays, five Mondays and five Tuesdays expiring as it does, on Tuesday.
It is feared that the great number of potato bugs will cause great damage to that crop this season.
Miss Jennie Smythe has accepted a position as saleslady in Dickson's Trade Palace, at Indianapolis.
James E. Matthews has been appointed administrator of the estate of Regina Bachelder, deceased.
The Baptist picnic on Walnut creek, west of the city, Sunday, attracted quite a crowd from Greencastle.
The Vandalia line offers tickets to Evansville Monday to the State Sunday school convention for $4.50.
The young Americans in Greencastle are almost dying to see the flaming new circus pictures on the bulletin boards.
Ben. F. Durham and wife, went to Waveland Sunday, to attend the funeral of Mr. D's grandmother, Mrs. Moore.
C. E. Anderson goes to Chicago to take a position as traveling agent for J. B. Reeme & Co., commission merchants.
James Owens is attending the races at Ft. Wayne with his trotting steed, "Willis Wood." He will be absent about one month, making a tour of southern Michigan. "Willis Wood" is a five-year-old son of "Rescue," and has trotted a mile in 2:27.

Resolutions of Respect.

WHEREAS, Almighty God, in His infinite wisdom has been pleased to remove from our midst our worthy sister, Sarah White, we deem it fitting to the fraternal esteem in which our Union held her, to offer this token to her memory; therefore, be it
Resolved, That we assure the bereaved family of our deceased sister of our sincere sympathy and condolence in their sorrow, that we cherish her memory with love and affection, and mourn her loss not without hope, but in the firm belief that she is a dweller in the mansion not made with hands eternal in the heavens.
Resolved, That our hall be draped in mourning for the period of thirty days, that a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to the family of the deceased, and also be spread upon the minutes of the Union and that the same be published in the Greencastle Banner.

McKenzie's Ad.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 21, 1881.
Mrs. Busy Bee, Lafayette, Ind.:
How be you this winter? Up here in Indianapolis it has been stinging cold, so things don't hum as they did last summer. I suppose you are in a cell, from what I saw in the Courier, which says all the bees are in cells in your place. I would like to know if they put you in cells for stinging that boy on the heel last summer. If so, it is a shame. If we sting a boy in this city they put the boy in the cell for fooling around us. I stung a boy last summer, and he went and told his dad, and the old man come out with vengeance in his eye, and I told him to "git." He inquired who struck his only son, and I told him I did. He said I "ought to be ashamed," and that raised my ire; I made a big whole stick out on his head, and that father broke half the commandments in less than a minute, and threw the pieces at me. I told him if he ever came in my way I would put the biggest head on him he ever had. J. A. McKenzie, the Clothier, told me I might, and I am going to do just as he says.
Stingingly your honey,
QUEEN BEE.

SHE WILL SLEEP TO-NIGHT.

BY SARAH T. BOLTON.

Smooth the bands of her silken hair,
On her queenly brow with tender care;
Gather the robe in a final fold
Around the form that will not grow old;
Lay on her bosom, pure as snow,
The fairest, sweetest of the downy blow.
Kiss her and leave her, your heart's delight;
In dreamless peace she will sleep to-night.

A shadowy gleam of life-light lies
Around the lids of her slumbering eyes,
And her lips are closed as in fond delay
Of the loving words she had to say;
But her gentle heart flows to the light,
And from dainty head to dainty feet
She is strangely cold, cold and white;
The fever is gone—she will sleep to-night.

Put by her work and her empty chair;
Fold up the garments she used to wear;
Let down the curtains and close the door;
She will need the gentle light no more;
For the task assigned her under the sun
Is finished now, and the guerdon won;
Tenderly kiss her, put out the light,
And leave her alone—she will sleep to-night.

O, blessed sleep! that will not break
For tears, nor prayers, nor love's sweet sake;
O, perfect rest! that flows down to the path,
No throb, no thrill of heart or brain;
O, life sublime beyond all speech,
That only the pure through dying reach!
God understands and His ways are right;
Bless His Beloved a long good-night.

Weep for the days that will come no more,
For the sunbeam flown from hearth and door,
For a missing step, for the nameless grace
Of a tender voice and a loving face;
But not for soul whose goal is won,
Whose infinite joy is just begun—
Not for the spirit enrobed in light,
And crowned where the angels are to-night.

UNEXPECTED AMPUTATION.

A servant found it under the front door early in the morning—a large, coarse sheet of letter paper, intricately folded and sealed with a red wafer. The simple superscription "Charles Glent, Wildland," was legible enough, despite the cramped, irregular penmanship. So also were the following lines, destitute of the date, address and signature:

"Years ago you did me a kindness which I vowed never to forget. In return I now pen the warning that your house will be entered to-morrow night. It is well-known to a certain thieving gang that you have a large sum of money by you. Be wise and have it removed to a place of safety. Above all things employ some trustworthy person to act for you. So surely as you neglect this charge, suspicions will be excited and your life possibly may pay the forfeit of your folly.

"Be careful also to provide a good and open reason for any journey you may deem it advisable should be made, for I assure you every one of your movements is closely watched. And lastly, do not be foolishly enough to give battle. The money is all that is wanted, and no personal injury will be offered if you keep quiet. Whether or not your servants have been tampered with I can't say."

Heavy lines of anxiety marked Mr. Glent's forehead as he read, and it was not surprising, the region being at that period a rough one in every way. Its locality and the circumstances which sent him there with his family, it is needless to mention.

"Strange how the thing ever leaked out," he muttered to himself, "but I suppose through Oscar's folly. And now what am I to do? Oscar will be off in ten minutes," glancing from the letter to the pale, faded countenance of his dissipated stepson, who stood at a little distance making hasty preparations for a journey. "And perhaps it is as well—these gambling hellas have sunk him too low for any honest employment."

The entrance of the remaining members of his family, with the hurried adieux and departures of Oscar Layne, ended for a time his uncomfortable reflections. But his cup of coffee, just then served, fully discussed, he passed the letter to his wife and daughter.

Mrs. Glent sat in mute horror. The daughter, a noble looking creature of some twenty years, was strongly nervous. She re-read the letter slowly and critically.

"To-morrow," she commenced thoughtfully. "That may either mean to-night or to-morrow night, papa. You see there is no date to it. We don't know whether it was written twelve or twenty-four hours ago."

"You are right. That never occurred to me. We have even less time than I supposed. But I see nothing for it but to let the money go."

"It is too badly needed, papa, to be quietly yielded to those wretches," Bessie quietly answered.

"True. But what is to be done? If you and your mother were not here, I would risk my life in taking it to the Bolton Bank. But as it is I can't conscientiously do so, and there is no one upon whom I can call."

"You! exclaimed both parents, utterly aghast for the moment.

"Yes, I am going," was the cool rejoinder.

"You are demented, Bessie!" cried her stepmother. "It is far better to lose the money than for you to run so great a risk."

"Determined, mamma, not demented," smiled Bessie, as her father said:

"You forget, Bessie that you will have a drive of three miles over a road too lonely to make you feel quite at ease, considering the character of those about us."

"I am too much like myself to be a coward," she answered firmly. "And indeed, I don't believe there is the slightest danger except imagination. My best protection, I think, will be our largest market basket, and that I shall take and bring home well filled. Your vest pistol would not, however, be out of place in my pocket, and will take it along, since I can handle it as dexterously as myself."

A few more objections were urged, only to be skillfully over-ruled, and Mr. Glent, feeling also that there was no actual danger, at last fully consented.

"Why not send for assistance, Charles?" suggested the not very perspicacious Mrs. Glent.

"That would never do in such a region and under such circumstances, unless we intended to keep an armed force about us," Bessie answered promptly. Mr. Glent, echoing her opinion most emphatically.

Owing to various trying delays, nearly two hours passed before Bessie could start. As she left the sitting room for the light wagon at the door, a small hatchet, which Oscar had that morning carelessly thrown on a chair, attracted her eye. She picked it up half absently, and with a glance at the keen edge, slipped the handle under her belt.

"What are you going to with that,"

Mr. Glent asked, as she concealed it beneath her sash.

"I don't know," she laughed, "It had a friendly look, and I was seized by an irresistible impulse to take possession of it, without any actual reason for doing so. Some how, it is in high favor with me."

Mr. Glent smiled. "You are a brave girl Bessie."

"And I have a right to be," was the proud rejoinder. "My grandfather was a brave soldier, and you are a brave civilian, or you would not be here."

The morning was a delicious balmy one, and Bessie drove fearlessly on, enjoying the wild scenery about her, though eye and ear were ever on the alert for possible dangers. The quick trot, which had scarcely been broken from the moment of starting, soon brought her to the wildest part of her journey, midway between Wildland and Bolton.

Immense forest trees on either side of the narrow road, with irregular, massive piles of frowning rocks which rendered it peculiarly adapted to the marauding villain's purpose. She had just penetrated its deepest shadows when her watchful eye caught sight, for a moment, of some stealthily moving object a short distance ahead—whether man or beast she could not decide.

"No, I will not fire even if I should be assaulted," she hastily thought, withdrawing her hand from the pistol she had involuntarily grasped. "It might invite worse."

And, with beating heart, she slipped the hatchet from belt to knee. She was none too quick, for the next moment a masked man darted from behind the rocks and seized the horse's head. Unused to such treatment, the highspirited brute plunged so violently as to shake off the villain's grasp. But nothing daunted, he caught the shaft and in spite of the speed at which the creature started forward succeeded, with the ease and dexterity of one skilled in feats of the kind, in seizing the dashboard with one hand and the body of the wagon just below with the other. But at the very moment he was in the act of springing up, the little hatchet's gleaming edge smote, just at the wrist, the hand near her foot, and with a groan he sprang or fell backward leaving on the floor a ghastly proof of the attack, in a bleeding hand.

I passed like a dream, and half unconscious of the shocking reality, Bessie drove for a while wildly and unthinkingly on. But before Bolton was entered, her mind had regained its usual activity. Checking the animal's mad career, she shudderingly bent down and wrapped the ghastly object at her feet in a couple of newspapers, fortunately found under the cushions. Then erasing as well as she could all signs of the adventures, she proceeded toward Bolton, and in a short time was quietly, though with pallid cheeks, transacting the business calling her thither. That done, she asked for one of the gentlemen to whom she was well known and related her story.

"I firmly believe the letter was a decoy," she concluded, "and also that the whole was the work of one individual."

"Undoubtedly, and that individual was no rough, you may rest assured," returned the gentleman.

"Still," said Bessie, "I shall act with all my intended caution, as you may be mistaken."

"You surely will not venture to return to Wildland alone."

"Certainly. My late assailant will have enough to look after his wound, and I have little fear of any other, as road is not infested with highwaymen."

The conference continued a few minutes longer, and then the matter was carried to the authorities.

A plaster cast of the fair, muscular hand which it was plainly evident had never graced the person of a rough, was quickly taken, and the agent was soon at his secret work.

Not many hours later Mr. Glent was lifting Bessie and her well-filled basket from the wagon.

"I made the purchase, considering it safer to do so," she remarked; "but I suspect time will prove me to have been needlessly cautious." And she briefly detailed the event of the morning.

"And what of the return journey?" he anxiously asked—a deeper shadow on his face than Bessie thought the occurrence warranted.

"I met with nothing to alarm—no trace of the villain remained."

As Bessie expected, undisturbed quiet reigned night after night.

But one day the little keen-eyed agent made his appearance at Wildland and asked for Mr. Glent. He seemed uneasy, and made his business known as quickly as possible.

"We have found our man, sir," he said abruptly. "Plenty of mother wit in him, too, or he would not have eluded us so long. But he got pretty low down, and ventured back to our place, and last night at play got into a difficulty, which ended in a bad wound;" he is dying and wants to see you.

"Who is he?" Mr. Glent asked with a certain grave anxiety.

"If you will excuse me, sir. He begged me to bring you without telling his name," the agent returned, "and I never refuse the dying."

For one instant they gazed into each others eyes. It was enough; Mr. Glent went unquestioningly.

He was taken to one of the low dens in which Bolton abounded, and to the bedside of the dying man.

"And my secret fears are realized; it is you, Oscar," he said, taking the hand and the poor wretch feebly and half doubtfully extended.

"It is, but don't reproach me," he gasped.

"I have enough of that here," touching his breast. "Too much! too much! Ah, if I could only live over one year of my life—one little year."

"That you can not, my poor Oscar; but you can—"

"I know—I have heard it many a time from the preachers, but don't believe it. I'm the man my deeds have made me. The life I lived here I lived there—and I love evil. Goodness disgusts me even in the midst of fear." And overcome by the excitement he sank back exhausted. Reviving a little presently he rested.

"I wanted to tell you—I wanted to ask you to forgive me—forgive me for my mother, too—I would not kill her by bringing her here. You see it was a debt of honor—and I had to have the money by fair means or foul, and so I wrote. I wrote it very carefully—very carefully, and all happened as I designed; except—." And he moved the maimed arm significantly. After a moment's silence he resumed with the same panting breath. "I supposed you would send the money to Bolton, as there was no other place, and I knew Bess would take it if I made it a matter of life or death for you to go. I was this way, you see—I did not want to fight for it—did not want to fight my stepfather. But I anticipated an easy victory over Bess by means of my superior strength. But she was too quick for me. Poor Bess, she got the hand that wrote the letter. Forgive me—my Mother."

That was all. Death claimed him.

Signs of Spring.

Boston Transcript.

The first sign of spring it the feeling that your hat is shabby.

The second is that your winter overcoat is getting heavy. If your overcoat is a particularly nice one, this sign will not be apparent.

The suburban begins to talk eloquently of garden seeds and fertilizers. He goes home loaded down with seedsmen's catalogues and hoes, and rakes, and agricultural information.

His neighbors' chickens are emancipated from their hibernations, and he thirsts for the blood of his neighbors.

The ash-pail in his yard rises grimly, like a remembrance of evil doings.

If you live in the country, you begin to talk of improvements of a cupola here, an L there and a piazza or bay window somewhere else.

If in the city, you commence your annual talk of shaking off your feet dust of the city and moving into the country.

Your aunt, or some other elderly female member of your household, has her say again of blood-a-changing and the consequent necessity for filling the stomach with decoctions of herbs and roots.

The dark shadow of the coming house-cleaning broods like a bird of evil omen over your once happy home.

The wife of your bosom talks of new carpets and new furniture.

The plumber no more robs you of your substance, the carpenter and the painter and the plasterer and the paper hanger taking what is left.

As you ride homeward in the cars you hear stories of early peas.

The English sparrow has set his alarm clock an hour earlier, and now arouses you from your slumbers at 4 a. m.

The pussy willow asserts itself, and the willow pollards show forth a jaundiced tint.

The mud sticketh to your shoes, and the passing vehicle supplies your raiment with the same article.

Anon the dust rises and fills your eyes and your mouth.

The wind blows where it listeth.

Your landlord has discovered that things are going to boom, and booms up your rent straightway.

The lightning-rod man and the peripatetic vender of step ladders knock at your door.

The shadow of the strawberry shortcake looms up no bigger than a man's hand.

Oysters grow into desuetude. Your liver begins to assert itself. The house-hunter is abroad.

Easter cards and Easter bonnets fill the shop-windows.

Siberian Exiles.

New York Herald.

They live in communities of twos and threes, have food, scanty provision of clothes, money, and books in common, and consider it their sacred duty to help each other in every emergency, without distinction of sex, rank or age.

The noble by birth get sixteen shillings a month from the government for their maintenance, and commoners only ten, although many of them are married and sent into exile with young families. Daily a gendarme visits their lodgings, inspects the premises when and how he pleases, and now and then makes some mysterious entry in his note book. Should any of their number carry a warm dinner, a newly-mended pair of boots, or a change of linen to some passing exile lodged for the moment in the police ward it is just as likely as not marked against him as a crime. It is a crime to come and see a friend off, or accompany him a little on the way. In fact should the Ispravnik feel out of sorts—the effect of cards and drink—he vents his bad temper on the exiles; and as cards and drink are the favorite amusements in these dreary regions, crimes are marked down against the exiles in astonishing numbers, and a report of them sent regularly to the governor of the province. Winter lasts eight months, a period during which the surrounding country presents the appearance of a noiseless, lifeless, frozen marsh.

No roads, no communication with the outer world, no means of escape. In course of time, almost every individual exile is attacked by nervous convulsions, followed by prolonged apathy and prostration. They begin to quarrel, and even hate each other. Some of them contrive to forge false passports and by a miracle, as it were, make their escape, but the great majority of these victims of the third section either go mad, commit suicide, or die of delirium tremens. Their history, when the time comes for it to be studied and published, will disclose a terrible tale of human suffering and administrative evils and shortcomings not likely to find their equivalent in the contemporary history of any other European state.

The Fakir of Ava.

The fakir of Ava retired from the show business several years ago with a fortune. He was a good sleight-of-hand performer, but his great success was in inventing the attraction of gifts.

He was on a tour in the south in 1857, and business was very bad indeed. "I happened to attend an auction sale," he says, "and was astonished to see how the colored people bought the cheap jewelry that was put up. I thought the matter over, and the more I thought the more I could see money in it for me in my business. I came north to a friend of mine in the jewelry business. He said he would sell me a bushel of sleeve buttons, studs, brooches, and earrings for so much—a few dollars. It was mighty nice looking—all brass, of course. I figured that my sleeve buttons cost me three cents a pair, my brooches and earrings seven cents a set, and so on."

The bait was eagerly bitten by the people, and the fakir, whose name is Hughes, is now worth $100,000.

ON FEMALE M D'S.

It Will Never Do to Have Them Fooling Around a Fellow.

Peck's Sun.

A St. Louis doctor factory recently turned out a dozen female doctors. As long as the female doctors were confined to one or two in the whole country, and those were only experimental, the Sun held its peace, and did not complain; but now that the colleges are engaged in producing female doctors as a business, we must protest, and in so doing will give a few reasons why female doctors will not prove a paying branch of industry. In the first place, if they doctor anybody it must be a woman, and three-fourths of the women had rather have a male doctor. Suppose these colleges turn out female doctors until there is as many of them as there is of male doctors, what have they got to practice on? A man, if there was nothing the matter with him, might call in a female doctor, but if he was sick as a horse, (if a man is sick he is sick as a horse), the last thing he would have around would be a female doctor. And why? Because, when a man wants a female doctor, he wants a female doctor, and he wants to feel well. He doesn't want to be bilious, or feverish, with his eyes bloodshot, and his mouth tasting like cheese, when a female is looking him over and taking an account of stock.

Of course these female doctors are all young and good-looking, and if one of them came into a sick room where a man was in bed, and he had chills, and was as cold as a wedge, and she should sit up close to the side of the bed and take hold of his hand, his pulse would run up to one hundred and fifty, and she would prescribe for a fever when he had chills. Then if he died, she could be arrested for malpractice. O, you can't fool us on female doctors. A man who has been sick and had male doctors, knows just how much he would feel to have a female doctor to come tripping in and throw her fur-lined cloak over a chair, take off her hat and gloves and throw them on a lounge, and come up to the bed with a pair of marine blue eyes, with a twinkle in the corner, and look him in the wild, changeable eyes, and ask him to run out his tongue.

Suppose he knew his tongue was cold, so it looked like a yellow Turkish towel, do you suppose he would like to run out five or six inches of the lower end of it, and let that female doctor put her finger on it to see how tarry it was? Not much. He would put that tongue up into his cheek, and wouldn't let her see it for twenty-five cents admission.

We have all seen doctors put their hands under the bed clothes and feel of a man's feet, to see if they were cold. If a female doctor should do that it would give a man cramps in the legs.

A male doctor can put his hands on a man's stomach, and liver and lungs, and ask him if he feels any pain there, but if a female doctor should do the same thing it would make a man sick, and he would want to get up and kick himself for employing a female doctor. O, there is no use a talking. It would kill a man.

Now, suppose a man has heart disease, and a female doctor should want to listen to the beating of the heart. She would lay her left ear on his left breast, so her eyes and rosy mouth would be looking right in his face, and her wavy hair would be scattered all around there, getting tangled in the buttons of his night shirt. Don't you suppose his heart would get in about 20 extra beats to the minute? You bet! And she would smile—we will bet $70 she would smile—and show her pretty pearly teeth, and the ripe lips would be working as though she were counting the beats, and he would think she was trying to whisper to him, and—Well, what would he be doing all this time? If he was not dead yet, which would be a wonder, his left hand would brush the hair away from her temple and kind of stay there to keep the hair away, and her left hand would get a sort of nervous and move around to the back of his head, and when she had counted the beats a few minutes and was raising her head he would draw the head up to him and kiss her once for luck, if he was as bilious as a Jersey swamp angel, and have her charge it in the bill. And when a reaction would get in, and he be as weak as a cat, and she would have to fan him and rub his head till he got over being nervous, and then make out his prescription after he got asleep. No; all of a man's symptoms change when a female doctor is practicing on him and she would kill him dead.

The Sun is a woman's rights paper, and believes in allowing women to do anything they can do as well as men are paid for the same work, taking all things into consideration; but it is opposed to their trifling with human life by doctoring a total stranger. These colleges are doing a great wrong in preparing these female doctors for the war path, and we desire to enter a protest in behalf of twenty millions who could not stand the pressure.

Curious Anticipations—The Veddas. All the Year Round.

Can it be supposed that when Dean Swift belied humanity by degrading it below the level of the brutes in his dreadful fiction of the Yahoos, he ever imagined that there existed aught that approximated toward the odious picture? Yet such is the case. There are, undoubtedly, races, whose attributes do, in various degrees, suggest if they do not realize the misanthropic fable of the men-beasts of Houyhnhms Land. The Nam-Niams of Africa, who live between the Gulf Benin and Abyssinia, are said to have tails, a statement confirmed by Dr. Hubsh, of Constantinople, in 1851. The "hairy people" mentioned by old Hanno seem to have a real existence, apart from the gorilla, judging from Miss Bird's account of the Ainos of Japan, a strange, savage, and little known race, supposed to be the aborigines of that country, but now only to be found on the island of Yezo. They are, she says, of the most ferocious aspect, owing to the profusion of their thick, soft, black hair and beards, and to the singular fact that their bodies are commonly covered with a vigorous growth of black hair or fur, upward an inch in length, and incrust with dirt, for Ainos never wash. Their food is "a stew of abominable things," and "a thick soup made of putty-like clay, which is boiled with the bulb of a wild lily." They believe themselves to be descended from dogs, but other characteristics of this strange people are not unamiable. Beyond these instances, and presenting a far more striking resemblance to the Yahoo type, there are the Veddas, or Weddahs, of Ceylon, their duplicates in Borneo and New Guinea, and kindred varieties discovered in the Philippine Islands, Terra del Fuego and South America. Only none of these are so hateful as the creatures of Swift's invention. It needed that fierce indignation against his kind, which he has recorded in his epitaph, to depict them. The Veddas and similar races in the islands of the Asiatic Archipelago are described as the aborigines of their respective countries, who have shrunk into the jungle and forest to escape from civilization, and have lived there for upward of two thousand years. They construct no habitations, but lodge in caves or trees or under over-hanging rocks. They are stunted in size, seldom exceeding four feet eight inches in stature, and but feebly built, except as regards their arms, which the constant use of the blow renders very muscular, notwithstanding their short, ape-like thumbs. With this weapon they kill animals for food; devouring, besides, snakes, reptiles, wild honey, ants' eggs and carrion of all kinds. They lack both memory and foresight, can not count or discriminate between colors, are filthy in their habits, and in everything save a rudimentary language of uncouth guttural sounds, and some dim vestiges of religion and social order, are as beasts of the field. Saddest, perhaps, of all, they never laugh. When they die they believe they become devils. Yet this benighted and outcast race, so low in organization, habits and character as scarcely to be distinguished from the monkeys of the jungle among whom they live, practice by instinct virtues which are not too common in civilization. They never lie, steal nor quarrel. Some of these unfortunate creatures have been half-tamed by the Cingalese and set to out-door work, like the Yahoos by the Houyhnhms. When the Prince of Wales visited the island, in 1876, certain of the jungle Veddas were actually caught in snare and traps to be exhibited to him; and one of the number—a female—postively died of fright in being secured. It was not a humane transaction, but the Veddas are regarded merely as animals. Finally, it may be remarked, in connection with Swift's curious anticipation, that he placed Houyhnhms Land near the great island-continent of Australia. It appears in the map of the first edition of "Gulliver" as due south of Nut's Land, in about 38 deg. south latitude and 125 deg. east longitude. Now, Ceylon is but 5 deg. west of this locality, though above, as New Guinea is just below the equator. The Yahoos could not have been better accommodated.

Child Murder—Lynched.

The Chicago Times has the following special, dated Atlanta, Ga., May 11:

The Post-Appeal this afternoon has this special from West Point: "Intelligence has reached here of a terrible tragedy which took place near Talladega, Ala., yesterday. A picnic excursion went out to the falls on the river. Among the number was Dr. William Toole, who was accompanied by his little daughter, a child of seven years. The mother of the little girl had dressed her up very nicely, putting on gold ornaments and a diamond pin. During the early part of the afternoon the child was missed, and the father went in search for her. As he approached the falls he saw a negro man carrying something with flying garments, and rushing on him, he saw that it was the dead body of his child. The negro had murdered her, stripped her of her jewelry, and was about to throw the body over the falls. The frantic father rushed on the savage fiend, grappled with him, and a furious fight took place over the body of the child. The father's cries for help were responded to by some of the picnic party. The negro was overpowered, and a rope being improvised, he was hung to a tree. It was found that the child had been choked to death. The negro had probably decoyed her away from her playmates, and, stifling her cries, carried her off for murder and robbery. In another moment the raging water would have swallowed up the dreadful secret of the crime, and when the body of the little girl was found it would have been supposed a case of accidental drowning. The monster of a murderer was left hanging to the tree and the picnic party was transformed into a funeral cortege, which conveyed the body of the little innocent to her stricken home. No event has ever occurred of such a dreadful and harrowing nature in that section of country."

Inviting their Doom.

The Logansport Journal has this to say:

The brewers and liquor dealers of Indianapolis have organized an association for the purpose of giving battle to the prohibition amendment. The plans of this association contemplate the organization of similar associations throughout the State, and the marshalling of all the forces of the liquor traffic against the election of a Legislature that will submit the amendment to a vote of the people. It is the avowed purpose of these anti-prohibitionists to force the amendment question into politics at the next election by pledging the solid liquor influence to the party that will take ground against the submission of the prohibition amendment to the people, and against the party that may dare to champion the right of the people to decide the matter. "Whom the gods destroy, they first make mad." The question of the adoption or rejection of the prohibition amendment is not a partisan question, and never should be forced into politics. Men in all parties differ upon it, and, let alone, will vote for or against the amendment solely upon its merits or demerits as they may view the question. But if the question is forced into the election next year, the case will be entirely different. The question will be upon the right and expediency of submitting the arguments on the subject of prohibition, pro and con, to the decision of the people, and thousands of men who might not vote for prohibition will battle for the rights and privileges of the people. Indeed it is doubtful if any party can be induced, even by the promise of a solid liquor vote, to take ground against this people's right and privilege on this question. If any party shall be so misled, however, that party will be taught a lesson it will never have an opportunity afterward to profit by. No party can succeed in Indiana as the champion of the doctrine that it is not safe to trust the people upon any question. Think, for a moment, reader, of a candidate for the Legislature saying to the voters of his district: "A great question has been agitated in which all of you are interested on one side or the other. It is a question that, in my judgment, involves personal rights. It is a question that certainly involves large property and commercial interests and investments. There are some who say that it also involves the only remedy for the most destructive evil that afflicts the body politic, but let these things be as they may, says our candidate, I am opposed to you dear people having anything to say on this great question. There are some persons who insist that you shall pass upon and settle this great question for yourselves, but I say I ought to settle it for you by voting against its submission to your judgment and decision, and I want you all to vote for me, with a big M, with that understanding." Could such a candidate be elected by an intelligent and self-respecting constituency? "Yet the election of just such candidates is the result the Indianapolis association expects to achieve by its present organization and efforts. But this is not all of their folly. If they can force the battle according to the above programme, the battle-ground of their certain defeat next year, will be a hot-bed in which a public sentiment in favor of the prohibition amendment will grow with amazing rapidity. The Kansas-Nebraska battle-field on the slavery question is an illustration of a very similar rapid growth. Like causes will produce like effects, and the anti-prohibitionists should take warning from the fate of the pro-slavery bigots. Nothing will so certainly secure the adoption of the prohibition amendment as the disregard of those who oppose it for the right and privilege of the people to decide upon it."

Romantic Love Story.

New York Herald.

The particulars of a very romantic love story were developed before Judge Dixon, Supreme Court, at Paterson, N. J. From the uncontradicted testimony in the case the following facts are gathered: Mr. John P. Clifford is a young man who resides at Yonkers, this state. He is a very respectable young man and of good habits, and so when he asked to be received as a suitor to the hand of Miss Ellen McKilvey, of Paterson, her parents did not offer any objection. The courtship proceeded very smoothly until Miss McKilvey was suddenly taken sick. The lover spent anxious days and nights, but finally the young lady recovered her health, but with it came a terrible affliction—the loss of sight. Before this the two had vowed to marry each other; now the lady offered to release him from his vow, but he would not consent to it, declaring that he had promised to marry her, and that he considered a promise as good as if the ceremony had been performed, and that her misfortune had only increased his affection for her. But her misfortune seemed also to have increased the affection entertained for her by her parents, and these absolutely refused to give their consent to the marriage, though they did not have any objection previous to the sickness of the young lady. Now that she was stricken with blindness they declared that they were the only persons who ought to take care of her. They told Mr. Clifford that under the circumstances they could never think of parting with their daughter, and requested him to give up his idea of marrying her. He used all the arguments at his command, but the parents were inflexible and would not be persuaded. The two lovers, however, were so attached to each other that it seemed to cruel to separate them altogether, and so Mr. Clifford was allowed to continue his visits. Miss McKilvey was over twenty-one years of age, and consequently her own mistress, and Mr. Clifford soon persuaded her that the demands of her parents were unreasonable. He finally persuaded her to marry him, and the ceremony was performed at St. Boniface's Catholic Church, in Paterson, on last Monday, by Rev. Father Hens. When the parents of the bride were informed of what had taken place they refused to give credit to it, and, accordingly, would not allow their daughter to accompany her husband to his home in Yonkers. Mr. Clifford concluded to have the matter settled at once, and, accordingly, consulted Mr. D. B. English, a lawyer of Paterson. The result was that a writ of habeas corpus was granted by Judge Dixon on Tuesday, and made returnable yesterday. The parents appeared in court with the daughter, and alleged that she was blind and that they had taken care of her all her life, and did not know why they should not continue doing as they desired to, though they did not want to deprive her of her liberty in any way. Mr. Clifford then produced the marriage certificate, and the parents of the bride saw that what he had told them was not mere fiction, but the truth. The court gave the custody of the blind bride to her husband and he led her away, the happiest man in the court-room. Mr. Clifford is not wealthy, but he has a pleasant home, and everything is in readiness there to receive the mistress for whom he made so great a sacrifice.

Mark Twain having been asked to contribute to the newspaper issued at the fair in aid of abused children in Boston wrote:

"Why should I want a 'Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children' to prosper when I have a baby down stairs that kept me awake several hours last night with no pretext for it but a desire to make trouble? This occurs every night, and it embitters me because I see now how needless it was to put in the other burglar-alarm, a costly and complicated contrivance, which cannot be depended upon, because it's always getting out of order and won't go, whereas, although the baby is always getting out of order, too, it can nevertheless be depended on, for the reason that the more it gets out of order, the more it does go. Yes, I am bitter against your society, for I think the idea of it is all wrong; but if you will start a Society for the Prevention of cruelty to Fathers I will write you a whole book."

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN.

Seldom can the heart be lonely,
If it seeks a lonelier still,
Self-forgetting, seeking only
Empire cups of love to fill.

Boston shows premonitory symptoms of the aesthetic craze. The wife of one of the leading merchants of that city was seen the other day with her elbows on her knees and with her eyes raised in sweet, sublime melancholy at a bean pot which was used by General Putnam during the siege of Botton.

Be it as it may, it is already a right. A few prominent ladies of the city, some rich dowagers in the provinces, and some of our robust farmers' wives will set the example, and the rest will soon follow.
They will have meetings, assemblies, clubs, as we have; they will say and do a great many absurd things, as we do; they will regret them, as we do, and little by little they will learn to correct them.
By mixing more in the politics of the country they will do less to encourage that of the church, which will not be a bad thing.
Finally, women—that is to say, the mother, wife, and daughter, this half of ourselves in all ages of life—having as well as we, responsibilities and duties, this living being, thinking, loving, suffering, a brain, a heart, a soul, just as we have (if surely we have one), has also necessities and aspirations, special interests to be promoted, improvements to accomplish, and therefore certain rights to maintain and enforce that require and ought to be directly represented in the discussion of public affairs by delegates chosen by herself.
Establish this new law of woman suffrage as you may think wisest, with all necessary precaution suitable to this country so wedded to routine, make certain qualifications if you think best. But pass the laws. There must be in the Chamber of Deputies some of the women of France.

A Model Mayor.
Indianapolis Journal.
There is one short and modest sentence in Mayor Caven's farewell message which deserves special notice, and the undoubted truth of which does him great honor. He says: "I have procured large numbers of the most abandoned drunkards to sign the pledge, and kept a record of them, and so far have found that only about one man in ten has appeared again upon the police records." Here is a mingling of official duty with humanity which is as praiseworthy as it is unusual. It is no part of the Mayor's duty to help the poor wretches before him up to a better life. It is common for Police Judges to dismiss them summarily to punishment, careless what becomes of them. The spectacle of a Mayor soliciting a wretched inebriate to enter upon a new road, helping him to do it, carefully registering his name, and watching him as he totters off is a new one, one not often seen about Police Courts. Familiarity with crime and its victims begets callousness, and is apt to harden the heart. It is most creditable to Mayor Caven that it has not had such an effect with him. A Police Judge, moved by such humane feeling as has characterized him, has greater opportunities for disinterested kindness and really missionary work than any one else. Fortune is the city served by officers of like character.

A Negro Philosopher.
President Lincoln once met with a negro on the deck of a steamboat, who illustrated the lines—
"He that fights and runs away,
Will live to fight another day."
The President, finding the negro had served in a regiment that suffered severely at the battle of Fort Donelson, asked if he was in the fight.
The colored man owned he had had a little taste of it, and then the following colloquy ensued.
"Stood your ground, did you?"
"No, sir, I runs."
"Run at the first fire?"
"Yes, sa; and would ha' run soon as I knowed it comin'."
"If our soldiers were all like you, traitors might have broken up the Government without resistance."
"Yes, sa; dar would hab been no help for it. I wouldn't put my life in de scale 'gainst any government dat ever existed; for no government could make up de loss."
"Do you think your company would have missed you if you had been killed?"
"Maybe not, sa; a dead white man ain't much to these sagers, let alone a dead nigger; but I'd ha' missed myself, and dat was de pint wid me!"

An Engineer's Heroic Act.
New York Tribune.
The eastward bound train on the New York and Greenwood Lake Railway, due at Bloomfield, N. J., at 5 o'clock was approaching the Bellevue avenue station, Saturday afternoon, and while descending the grade the engineer, Albert Rikel, saw a little child upon the track a short distance ahead. The air-brakes were at once applied and a warning whistle was sounded. The engineer saw, however, that the train could not be stopped in time to save the child, and he hurried out upon his engine and down upon the cowcatcher. Taking a firm grip with one hand to steady himself, he leaned over, grasped the child before the engine touched it, and lifted it out of danger, frightened but only slightly bruised. The child was Stanley McDowell, aged two years, the only son of Charles E. McDowell, of the firm of McDowell Brothers & Co., of No. 15 Courtlandt street, this city, whose home is in Bloomfield. The boy had made his way through a loose paling in the fence surrounding the grounds belonging to the house, and had climbed a high embankment of the railroad. Mr. McDowell, the boy's father, has presented the engineer with $200.

Snow Out West.
Detroit Free Press.
"Much snow—much snow out in Minnesota this winter?" he almost yelled in answer to the query; "well, we've had some flakes, and don't you forget it!"
It was at the Union Depot, and his loud voice soon drew a crowd around him.
"You Michigansers puff and feel powerful big over a fall of two feet of snow," he went on, "but you are a vain set. Do you know how deep the snow is on the highway in Northern Minnesota? Well it's about fourteen feet, as near as you can get the figures. That is, it was four weeks ago, and the chances are that another five feet have been added since I left home."
"Must be bad traveling," suggested an Eastern man.
"Probably it would if anybody tried to travel," was the reply. "We don't go spooning around out there in winter."
"Is twenty feet the deepest snow you've had?"
"Deepest! Who's been talking about deepest? That's what we call a flurry. On the 2d of January we had nine feet of snow on a level. It then snowed for ninety-eight hours without a stop. When it ceased we had thirty-six feet of snow on the ground. My house was at least fourteen feet below surface, and no building could be seen in any direction."

"And you dug you way out?"
"I did, eh? What for?"
"Why, didn't you?"
"No, sir! It was twenty-six days before the snow settled below the tops of the windows, but I was in no hurry."

A Gambling Incident.
A lady of rank in Paris died recently in the fashionable quarter of the Arc de Triomphe, of whom an interesting story is told. She was a famous card player, and was credited with knowing every game there was to know. When traveling in a foreign land she had, one day, in a hotel, met a Russian lady with that passion for gambling, said to be inherent in the Russian nation. Anxious to play with the lady from Paris, she wrote requesting a few games. Her request was granted, and the ladies played all night, the Russian losing at every hand, until her opponent had won from her more money than the mines in the Ural had produced for her revenues in twenty-five years. At last the Russian lady made a despairing effort to regain her fortune, but without avail. Rising from the table, she told the French lady how she had lost more than she possessed, but that in her desire to pay a debt of honor she would instruct her steward to convey to her the title deeds of all the mines and estate she owned. At this the victorious antagonist smiled and requested that she might have her own way in the matter, since she had won. A priest and a lawyer were sent for. When they arrived, the Russian lady was asked to bind herself by a solemn oath never again to touch a card or risk money at any game of chance. She did so, and then signed an engagement to pay her antagonist the annual sum of $2,000. The vow never to play cards for money again she faithfully kept, and the $2,000 was punctually paid every year, the French lady giving it the name of the "Queen of Spades" tax, and invariably giving it to the poor of the city of Paris.

Europe's Rich City.
Frankfort-on-the-Main, now containing a population of about 100,000, is reputed to be the richest city of its size in the whole world. If its wealth were equally divided among its inhabitants, every man, woman and child would have, it is said, 20,000 marks, or some $5,000 apiece. There are as may be supposed, a good many very poor people in the town; but the citizens are, as a whole, in unusually comfortable circumstances, more so, probably than the citizens of any other capital in Germany or Europe. It is asserted that there are 100 Frankforters worth from $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 each, and 250 who are worth $4,000,000 and upward. The city is one of the great banking centers of the globe. Its aggregate banking capital is estimated at $200,000,000, more than one-fourth of which the famous Rothschilds, whose original and parent house is there, own and control. The annual transactions in bills of exchange are in excess of $100,000,000. Its general trade and manufacturing industries have greatly increased since the formation of the German Empire, to which Frankfort was originally averse, being a free city and an opponent of Prussia until coerced, in July, 1866, by Gen. Von Falkenstein, who entered it at the head of an army and imposed a fine of $1,000,000 florins for its insubordination. Frankfort is such a place for conventions and assemblies of all sorts that it is very apt to be full of strangers, and is consequently very expensive and by no means satisfactory to tarry in.

Ships That Were Never Heard From.
New York Star.
The following European steamers have never been heard of after leaving port:
The President, which sailed from New York on March 11, 1841, had among her passengers Tyrone Power, the famous Irish comedian, and a son of the Duke of Richmond.
The Great Britain was lost in a storm on the coast of Ireland; left September 22, 1846.
The City of Glasgow was never heard of after leaving Glasgow in the spring of 1854; 489 lives were lost.
The Pacific was never heard from after January 23, 1856, when she left Liverpool; 200 lives lost.
The Tempest was never heard of after she left New York on February 26, 1857.
The Connaught was burned off the coast of Massachusetts October 7, 1860.
The United Kingdom left New York April 17, 1869; was never heard from; 80 lives lost.
The City of Boston left New York January 25, 1870, and was never afterwards heard from; about 160 lives lost.
The Hibernia foundered off the Irish coast November 29, 1868, but was heard from.
The Carolina was wrecked on the Irish coast November 20, 1863, and 50 lives lost.
The Ismailia left New York September 28, 1878, and is yet unheard of.

The New York Conference.
A conference of Stalwart Republicans was held Sunday afternoon at the residence of Vice President Arthur. Conkling and Platt left the Fifth Avenue Hotel early in the afternoon and went directly to the Vice President's house. Soon after representative Republicans began to gather at the same place, and only a few were actually engaged in the conference, but many were gathered to hear the result and offer their advice. What transpired was not given out for publication, but it is understood that Mr. Conkling exhibited a large number of letters and telegrams affirming his action, and urging him to be a candidate for reelection. It is also understood that he announced that he would accede to the request of his friends and be a candidate, and Mr. Platt also decided. Confidential assurances were given by the majority of those present that he (Conkling) could be elected without difficulty. It was also decided that Conkling and Platt should go to Albany in company, and make a general canvass.

Many telegrams were sent to all parts of the State, urging immediate and vigorous action. Great dependence was placed upon personal efforts of Conkling. His presence in Albany, his friends believe, will be beneficial. The attitude of the Senators toward the Administration was one of the points discussed to-day. It was concluded to keep it out of the canvass as much as possible. "Mr. Conkling will not agree to support the Administration," said one of those present to a Tribune reporter.
A gentleman who was authorized to speak for Mr. Platt, said to-night: "Mr. Platt was present with Senator Conkling as invited guests at the Vice President's. They met there a number of friends representing various parts of the State, and then with letters and telegrams they gave them assurances of support from every district in the State."
"Support for what," asked the reporter.
"Support in their canvass for reelection at Albany. They have decided to make a vigorous fight, and, if necessary, will themselves go to Albany for the purpose. They will wait first to hear the results of the preliminary canvass that will begin to-morrow night. Both Senators think they will be re-elected and fully vindicated in their resentment for the insults put upon them by the President."
A prominent city official, who was at Arthur's house, said: "Yes, we held a conference, a very important one. I cannot tell you what was done as it would defeat the very purpose of the conference."
"Will Conkling and Platt be candidates?"
"Yes, and I believe they will be elected."
The paper which the half-breeds have got thirty signatures to is merely a pledge not to vote for candidates opposed to the administration. It will not keep any one out of the caucus, nor prevent any one from voting for Conkling and Platt. They will not make the contest on the ground of opposition to the administration, although they will not pledge themselves to support it. They will show the country that the New York stalwarts and her Senators are upheld in refusing to be insulted with impunity by an Ohio politician.

GENERAL GRANT
"Will General Grant assist in the canvass at Albany?"
"He is expected to reach here in time to lend his assistance if necessary."
Senator Conkling in answer to a question of a friend said he was in the hands of his friends, and would do what they thought best, and did not think the State approved the course of men who proved traitors to General Grant at Chicago, and would show that its Senators did right in protesting against rewarding them.
THE ADMINISTRATION SIDE.
Said an Administration Republican: "We expected this result from the first, but Conkling and Platt cannot be elected, and we have fifty-two names of Republican members of the Legislature pledged not to go into any caucus before which Conkling and Platt will be candidates. There are many who will follow the same course who did not care to sign. The sentiment of the true Republicans of the State is unanimously against the course of Conkling and Platt. It is the worst kind of State's right doctrine, and would break up the party, and members of the Legislature who were elected as 'machine' men will hesitate before committing political suicide by voting for Conkling and Platt. Neither of them can be returned again, and there are plenty of men who can be elected who will represent the State properly, but Conkling and Platt never—not even with the assistance of the Democrats, which I understand Mr. Conkling is now seeking."
During the day the corridors of the Fifth Avenue Hotel were almost deserted by politicians, but in the evening, Conkling and Platt having returned to the hotel, there was a steady stream of callers until a late hour. At short intervals the district leaders dropped in, and, on sending up their names, were at once shown up to the leaders' room. In most instances they were asked to see certain influential Republicans, with a view of securing their attendance at Albany to-morrow. The prevailing desire seems to be to press the fighting. There is much discussion as to whether the half-breeds will go into caucus, and strong efforts are being made to prevent their doing so. The Republican Senators and Assemblymen number 106; consequently 54 is a majority in caucus. It requires eighty-one votes to elect a Senator on joint ballot; therefore, to prevent the election of Conkling and Platt, only twenty-seven Republicans need stay away from the caucus and vote against them in joint session.
The half-breeds claim that forty-two Republican Senators and Assemblymen have pledged themselves against Conkling and Platt. John J. O'Brien, a recognized leader in the city, said to a Tribune reporter this evening: "The friends of Conkling and Platt are not by any means discouraged. On the contrary, we are going into this fight to win. All of Mr. Conkling's friends will be found at Albany to-morrow evening, working for him with a will. There is no hesitancy, so far as I know, on the part of any of those in this city who have heretofore been identified with him in again going to the front for him. We think the action of the Senate in adjourning last Monday before receiving the Governor's communication announcing the resignation of the Senators and thus postponing the election one week, is a positive gain for us. The tide was then setting in their direction. The time will be well used by us. It will allow us time to organize our forces and get well into line."

The probabilities are very strongly against the return of Messrs. Conkling and Platt to the Senate.

The Greencastle Banner.

From various leading physicians and prophets comes the prediction that the summers of 1881 and '82 will witness the greatest fatality in epidemics ever known. The larger cities are preparing for this by having cleanliness rule. While there is no occasion for any unusual scare, it is always best to be on the safe side. There is yet room for improvement in Greencastle. Some of the less frequented places in the city—including quite a number of alleys—are in such a condition as to breed pestilence. An obnoxious stench arises from a great many vaults. These obstacles to health could be easily removed with a small exertion on the part of the property holders. Citizens should look to this matter if they desire to promote the health of our city.

A missionary meeting was in progress at the Catholic church last week, closing on Sunday night. The prime object of the meeting was to bring back into the fold of the church those who had strayed away. Father Damon, of Chicago, and Rev. Van Krevel, of St. Louis, were present and led the meetings. Father Damon delivered three lectures which were highly commended by his people. The first on Confession; the second, Infallibility of the Catholic church; third, Transubstantiation. At the Sunday morning mass the church was comfortably filled, and communion services were held. Twenty-six little girls dressed in white, with flowing veils, followed by twelve little boys, also uniformly dressed, filed into the church, received the communion and were addressed by Father Damon.

A friend of the BANNER corrects us in our history with relation to Rev. Girard Burton, of whom we spoke in our issue of the 5th inst. Instead of leaving Asbury to go to the war, he left because of a rebellion in the college by the Senior class, all of whom went to Bloomington and graduated. He afterward removed to Sullivan county and was elected by the Democracy as their representative in the Legislature of 1863. While here, he, with a number of others, made himself somewhat prominent by defending the Confederacy, and dispensing consolation to the Northern Democracy. The records of that Legislature are by no means flattering to him. During the course of some remarks at prayer in the college, one morning during his recent visit here, he took occasion to refer to his college trouble and defended the students in rebellion. Such speeches are certainly not calculated to do the University any good.

Close of the City Schools.

The public schools will close next week—the third ward on Tuesday, second on Wednesday and first on Thursday. The graduating exercises of the high school will take place in the third ward hall on Friday, June 3d, commencing promptly at 10 a. m. The exercises of each ward will consist of oral examination work in the forenoon of each day, and entertaining exercises in the afternoon, commencing at 9 a. m. and 1:30 p. m. The primary departments in each ward will close in the forenoon. Oral examination and exercises of the B grade in the high school on forenoon of Thursday, commencing at 8 o'clock. Prof. Lee urgently requests that parents attend all these exercises.

South End.
The South End could ill afford to get along without its manufacturing establishments. They furnish employment to a large number who would seek homes in other cities were they not here. The rolling mill employs about 130 men, Riley's keg factory 13, Cole Bros. 50, J. T. Wilson's foundry 6, Harris Bros. 10, flouring mill 6, and Callender & Dunn's flouring mill 4, a total of 189 men. The trade of these men is a considerable item.

The Vandavia pay train passed over the road Saturday, scattering the loaves among the boys.

Common Council—Monday Night.

The fire committee reported the purchase of a horse for the department at a cost of $165.
An ordinance fixing the salaries of officers for the ensuing year was presented and passed. It provides that the Mayor's salary shall be $500; clerk, $400 (reduction of $48); treasurer, $600; Marshal, $600; Assessor, $125; city attorney, 50 cents on each conviction (reduction of $1), and $2 per night for attending council meetings; civil engineer, $150 (a reduction of $48); fire chief, $75; street commissioner, $175 per day for each day's work. Members of the school board, $75; councilmen, $2.50 for each evening's attendance at council meetings (increase of 50 cents).
Darnall moved that the ordinance be adopted by sections which was defeated by the Mayor's casting vote. The ordinance was then carried in the same manner, Blake, Riley and Smider in the affirmative, and Darnall, Phipps and Ratliff in the negative.
The bonds of Wm. Daggy, civil engineer, and Robert Stack, street commissioner, were approved and filed.

Asbury University.

The college base ball club played the South End club last Saturday. At the seventh inning the South Enders threw up the game. The score stood 33 to 13 in favor of the college club.
Next Tuesday will be given as a holiday to the college. There will be recitations Monday morning. In the afternoon the cadet corps will assist in the decoration of the soldiers' graves. Lt. Hamilton will be marshal of the day.
The Delta fraternity has captured and initiated Dr. Marine.
Dr. Martin will conduct the quarterly meeting services at Centenary Church, Terre Haute, next Sunday.
H. C. Clippinger and T. J. Shannon departed Tuesday for Cleveland, Ohio, to attend the International Y. M. C. A. convention held in that city this week.
The D. K. E. base ball club is the champion of Asbury, having beat the college club in a hotly-contested game.
Dr. Gobin will deliver the Decoration address at Lafayette Monday.

The members of the Senior class were awarded no honors this year, the faculty having discontinued that meaningless custom. The members of the class elected the three Japanese students to speak on graduation day, and the remainder of the class drew for positions. Ten were selected in this way. Annual examination of classes will begin June 16. The Rev. Dr. Felton, of St. Louis, will deliver the term lecture on Sunday afternoon. On Wednesday, the 22d of June, the alumni will present the college, through Hon. Mark L. DeMotte, a portrait in oil of President Berry. Dr. McNutt will reply in a brief address. The Seniors will hold their class day exercises in the afternoon. In the evening will be held the reunion and banquet of the society of alumni. Gov. A. G. Porter will deliver the oration, and Miss Minnette Taylor will read the poem. On Thursday will occur the graduating exercises. The master's oration is to be delivered by C. R. Hammond, of 78.

On Monday afternoon the Darnall-Grant prize contest in oratory will take place. Tuesday morning the Kunear-Monnette prize contest will take place between the representatives of the three societies. In the afternoon the G. C. Cloud prize contest will take place. At night the D. K. E. fraternity will give a banquet to its alumni and lady friends at the parlors of the Grand Central Hotel. On Wednesday night the Beta Theta Pi fraternity will hold a banquet at the Grand Central.

Rev. Edward Swem, of Greensburg, a former student of Asbury, was in the city visiting old associates the latter part of last week.

Dr. Gobin will occupy the pulpit of Central Avenue Church, Indianapolis, next Sunday.

Thomas C. Stunkard, once a student of Asbury, carried off the prize of the West Point cadetship at the examination held at Crawfordsville last week.

Quite a number of students went to Indianapolis Monday to hear Ingersoll lecture.

The Sophs. are being examined in biology this week.
Senior vacation began last Monday. In the evening the Senior social was held at President Martin's. It is generally pronounced the best and most informal social the class has ever had. About ten o'clock Philo and Plato adjourned and went over to the Dr.'s and serenaded the Seniors.

There will be no valedictory speech this year.

Misses Lizzie Brattin, Minetta Taylor and Jodie Cavens, attended a fraternal social at Franklin Friday night. On the return home Miss Brattin visited friends in Indianapolis for a few days.

Miss Minnie Knight contemplates a tour through Kentucky during the summer vacation, for the purpose of giving readings. Miss Knight has rare talent as a reader, and it has been highly cultivated under the best instructors. She is a general favorite here, and the BANNER suggests that a complimentary benefit be tendered her previous to her departure. If given it ought to occur before Commencement week at the college.

Charlie Coffin has been hired as principal of the Westfield High School for the next year at a salary of $1,000.

Lulu Slavens, '85, left college last week on account of ill health. She will not return again.

Dr. Baker led a hunting expedition, armed with tripods and baskets, into the woods last Saturday in search of bugs, snakes, etc.

All three of the Senior Japs. will speak at commencement.

Charley Mikels will have a good contest speech. He has been out of college writing on it for three weeks.

Rev. Thomas Rodgers will deliver the University lecture next Sunday.
